I know Italian and you are no Tony Soprano. You are more like Curly Howard of three stooges fame. Peewee Herman came from either you or the ugly Canadian.

Found some nice wet leaves on my longwire yesterday. Got everything cut back two feet so maybe I can get two months before I have to cut again.

Now lets see how the DXing goes.

So, what made you crazy enough to believe Obama was born in Kenya?

Was it caused by chemicals, or some sort of head injury?

LOL, my ex-GF who lurks here said you poor kooktards who believe he was born in Kenya are "fascinating cases", as in head cases. She only treats kids though, so she wouldn't be able to help you, Telemundoh, not that someone like you wants to be helped. Your family must just be so mortified when you publicly spew your kooktardic nonsense. Night out at The Sizzler, complete with Telemundoh doing a monologue about Obama being born in Kenya. Now that's my idea of dinner theatre.

> Now go bow before your maker the almighty TV to be fed

I've never seen anything as stupid as the Obama BC kooktardery on TV before..Not even close.

Perhaps Truman Capote is involved in Telemundoh's fantasies?

You're really getting far out there, Telemundoh. Soon, you'll be spouting Obama BC kooktardery in front of the local federal building.
That would be a great Youtube video though, probably funnier than the classic "FEMA Camp" kookvids.

So just what IS your point? We ALREADY have a form of socialized medicine, albeit "hidden".

We have all heard about (and complained about) the "twenty dollar band aid".

Forty million people do NOT have health care. Rather than let them die when they get sick, we treat them in the ER.

Guess what? SOMEBODY has to pay for their ER treatment. That is why the band aids (and other stuff) is priced so high. Those without health care are being subsidized by those that DO have health care.

Sorry to disappoint all you anti-socialists out there in radio land, but this subsidizing sounds like "socialism" to me -- and its been going on for years, under both the Repubs and Democrats.

It doesn't 'sound like' an oxymoron....it is one!

Well, let's say people who call themselves 'conservatives'. Genuine conservatives (on both sides of the Atlantic) have more sense.

>Actually, it was coined by a socialist writer, > none other than the respected and influential left-winger H.G. Wells, > who in 1931 called on fellow progressives to become "liberal fascists" > and "enlightened Nazis." Really.

Indeed. Let's explore this further.The origin of this garbage appears to be the following article. The citation is:-

Journal of Contemporary History, Vol. 35, No. 4, 541-558 (2000)
(c) 2000 SAGE Publications

H.G. Wells's 'Liberal Fascism'
Philip Coupland
University of Warwick, UK

And here is the abstract:-

"During the 1930s H.G. Wells's theory of revolutionary praxis centred around a concept of 'liberal fascism' whereby the Wellsian 'liberal' utopia would be achieved by an authoritarian élite. Taking inspiration from the militarized political movements of the 1930s, this marked a development in the Wellsian theory of revolution from the 'open conspiracy' of the 1920s. Although both communist and fascist movements evinced some of the desired qualities of a Wellsian vanguard, it was fascism rather than communism which came closest to Wells's ideal. However, in practice, despite the failure of approaches to parties of the left and centre as possible agents of revolution,
Wells rejected the British Union of Fascists. The disparity between Wells's theory and his actions when faced by the reality of fascism echoes the unresolved tension between ends and means at the heart of the concept of 'liberal fascism'. "

You will note the following points:-

'Liberal fascism' refers to a tactic of revolution - the imposition of a liberal revolution by means of an authoritarian coup by an elite (possibly commanding a militarised organisation). And there the resemblance ends....it has nothing whatever to do with the actual philosophy behind the revolution, which is still essentially liberal (in the sense of emancipatory) in nature.

Note also that Wells would have nothing to do with actual fascists.
Indeed, he was repelled by them.

But you can see how a second rater like Goldberg might get things muddled ...

> His words, indeed, fit a much larger pattern of fusing socialism with > fascism: Mussolini was a leading socialist figure who, during World > War I, turned away from internationalism in favor of Italian

Which had nothing in common with socialism. He had the Matteoti, the italian socialist leader murdered.

Which also had nothing in common with socialism. He put the Social Democrats in concentration camps.

Actually, they only do to political illiterates like Goldberg and yourself...

It's actually a pile of crap that was panned in the serious media.

Orwell was referring to its use as an insult! So what! We all know that it is used unthinkingly as an insult. Goldberg's book is still crap, though.

If you define 'stae' as part of a corporate entity, a vision of society...

Well, so does (genuine) conservatism! Or haven't you notices? The difference is that fascism utilises race as the ultimate poltical solvent, and (in some versions) outlines a theory of a so-called revolution.

> It does so by exalting the state over the True socialism is about individual emancipation. Fascism is the exact opposite.

That isn't always the case. You see, the problem is that Godberg is American. All his concepts belong to parts of the American right.
That's why some reviewers say that he doesn't understand fascism, which stands in a European political tradition.

I have tried to respond to your original reply, but the system will not let me. So I will answer here.

Firstly, I expect you to answer the points that I made in my posting.
If you cannot, I am not prepared to to deal with a lot of citations from a variety of sites that appear to be hagiography of Jonah Goldberg. Do you have an opinion on the Coupland article? Or are you just conent to parrot any amount of junk?

Secondly, I should point out that a number of us have had problems with the wikipedia site entry for Liberal Fascism, since someone is determined to revert material that is posted about H.G. Wells on this matter.

I own a very nice, in great physical and cosmetic condition Telefunken Opus 7 AM/FM/Shortwave big wooden cabinet table model radio.There are at least two or more different looking models of those Telefunken Opus 7 radios.The one I own has the slanted speaker grills on the side of the radio, one speaker grill on each side of the radio and of course speakers in the front of the radio.I bought that radio at a Goodwill store for only $4.00,,, Four Dollars.They don't build them like that anymore.Same same for my made in Germany Grundig AM/FM/Shortwave/Phonograph wooden cabinet floor model radio.I bought that radio at a Goodwill store for only $14.00,,, Fourteen Dollars.My radios are not for sale or trade for love or money.I never part with any of my radios.

Yes, you don't have to cite this junk again. Look, we cannot avoid talking about 1930s definitions, since Wells used this term in the 1930s. We have to understand what he meant by it. It's a largely forgotten historical episode, that is until Goldberg discovered it and thought it suited his purpose. He distorted Wells's concept to suit his own ends. If you read Coupland (and others who have researched this period) you will know that Goldberg is a blithering idiot.

Indeed it is, since only Goldberg has used the term since the 1930s.
Now if you take the bother to read the actual article, you will find that Goldberg himself claims to have been inspired by Wells's concept.
But some idiot seems to revert every attempt that we make to compare Wells's views with Goldberg's....

Yes. People do use terms wrongly, and they become insults. But it is a fantasy to suggest that the underlying ideology of fascism changed as a result.

Just 'imagine' David Letterman making similar remarks
about Micheal Obama an her daughters M* & S**

Again had David Letterman making similar remarks about Micheal Obama an her daughters M* & S Letterman would have already been FIRED and most likely in Jail Too.

The Lowe's store near me has seven or eight outdoor storage buildings on display in the parking lot.There is one of them I like, it has sort of a gambrel roof with a storage loft.I think it is the 10 foot by ten foot Rainier model shed.Next time I go over there, I am taking my tape measure with me and do some measuring.I can build a storage shed like that one for my back yard for less money.

Jail time? In what universe, and whatever for?

Man, are you guys going over the top on this nonsense.

Those houses are over 40 years old, probably 50, and they've been parking on the gravel driveways all that time, but suddenly, they get ticketed.

Insanely stupid.

LOL, hizzoner the Mayor is hardly a liberal. He is insane though. At least he hasn't cried on camera lately. He's being recalled soon enough and probably figures, "what the hell!" at this point.

It's very interesting how you think of gay stuff when you read our much? Oh yeah, perverted, that's it!

You need to speak to someone about this gay fixation of yours. Seeing gays everywhere is a symptom of a bigger problem.

Between the Obama BC delusions and the above issue, you're a real mess.
But I'm sure that you can get help. It's high time, Telemundoh.

After 61 years of playing with, and working with AC electricity I finely got mine. On top of a 12 "Aluminum" ladder in the rain I stuck the end of an un-insinuated wire into a hot 220vAC wire and got the crap stocked out of me and had to throw myself into space to get away from it.

I hit three flowerpots, and a tree on the way down then landed on a cement border around the tree.

I'm OK, sore cut up a little but alive. The juice went in my left hand and out my left knee so it didn't cross my heart or other organs (or pianos) on the way out. Left hand hurts and left knee is swollen and very sore.

I could feel each cycle of the AC as it went threw me and I could not open my hand. A smaller or person who was not in as good a shape as I am would have fried their heart. 5 minutes after the stock/fall my BP was 132/62 with a pulse of 65, that's high for me but I'll take it.

I have had many friends do the same thing and die. Over 33 years as a telephone man I lose a lot of friends to doing the wrong thing at the wrong time and today it was me BUT, I'm OK.

Don't bother Dave. Just do a search of his posts on this group for the past few years and you'll get the picture. He has a Jekyll and Hyde personality, especially when Hyde has been drinking.

Glad you're OK.

I had one experience like that when I was maybe 16 or 17 and I decided to mess around inside a Hammarlund receiver, quite the shock.

Only other thing like that I saw was another guy in the Navy getting into about 5 KV, sent him across the work space, but he was OK.

You keep doing that Cuz, and your adventure will be over and you won't make it to dementia.

My most fun shock was when I was about 22. Was working on a microwave oven, and got across that .5uf 4KV cap. Definately a more stout jolt than from a TV CRT... I always thought, up to that time, that getting launched backward across a room by a jolt like that was something that only happened in cartoons.. well.. after I picked myself up from a large pile of stainless steel cookware on the other side of the kitchen, I thought much differently. Definately got my attention (and got my heartrate up to about 200 for a couple minutes..)

I stuck a coat hanger in the sparkplug on an oil hot water tank onetime, went across the room also.

I've had a few trips across a room backwards.

Glad to hear you are OK.

But, whatever prompted you to "stick the end of an un-insinuated wire

Got my education from SWB in Dallas then owned my own consulting company all over the world and a EPBX, LAN and sound systems east of LA.

I started as a Maintenance Lineman worked my way up to a walking PBX man in Dallas, five years.

Like ya say, you think it only happens in a cartoon, but when it happens to you, it becomes a very, very fast cartoon!

Another story I related to Cuzz Burr this morning had to do with a fellow who removed what he thought was a defective pressure gauge from a fuel tank access cover that was in our workspace. The tank itself was directly below us.

The gauge was indeed defective, tank still pressurized, and at the time all our fire control gear, radar stuff, computers, were fired up.

A few hairy and scary moments there.

I still remember the very shocked look on my fellow sailors face as he tried to plug the flow of fuel that was spraying out all over the place.

You went almost as high as the Space Shuttle, didn't you?

One time I was replacing one of the wall outlets (120 volts) in my living room.I didn't turn off the electric power to my living room because I didn't think I would get shocked.

Never grab two hot wires at the same time while holding pliers in each hand.You can't let go of them.My body tripped the circuit.I am glad it wasen't 240 volts I was messing with.

Never grab three hot wires with pliers in each hand and the wire strippers in your mouth while you're taking a quick shower during a lightning storm. I had to fall away, taking out two bottles of shampoo, one hair conditioner, a bar of Ivory soap, the shower curtains and four yellow rubber duckies.

..and you try telling that to the kids these days, well..they just don't believe you.

I was saved by landing on a recent purchase of bulk toilet paper. The stuff's a bargain. It has all sorts of petroleum distillate enhanced scents in it. Those Chinese are sure clever in enhancing their exports.

You just never know WHAT they'll include at no extra cost.

That was about fifteen years ago when I replaced that wall outlet in my living room, because the old wall outlet, whatever I plugged in wouldn't stay plugged in.I had probally had a few beers too.Otherwise, I probally would have cut the juice to all of the four outlets in my living room.Two of the wall outlets are on one circuit, the other two are on a different circuit.

That's very telling, Roy. According to all reports John Lennon was very happy in December of 1980. The only person who did not go through a lot of anguish was Mr. Lennon himself. Our own death is one thing we will not have to experience.

Quit eating meat, for the most part. I just have occasional barbecue,

You were lucky, I knew a guy who died from grabbing the wrong wire.

I have three I remember, the first was when I touched the chassis of my record player I had when I was 4 or so with one hand, while holding onto a drill (I was using power tools at a very young age since my dad was useless when dealing with that stuff) and got zapped really good. I felt bad for a while, and had a slight burn on my hand where the juice passed into and out of the drill.

The second, and worst one was in my CB days and I had my linear opened up and was grabbing my D-104 with my left hand, while using a screwdriver to make adjustments on the linear when it was keyed up. I had my index finger touching the shaft, and the next thing I know, I was flying through the closet door, about 10 feet away. A friend of mine was talking to me when it happened, and he heard a "ZZZZZZZZZZT!", and I was gone for a while. Luckily, I just had the mike loosely plugged in, so it just popped out when I flew. I think the closet door hurt me worse than the shock.

The third time was about 20 years ago, I was working on a friend's old Hallicrafters SW receiver, replacing a lot of rotten caps. I knew better, but I put my hand on the front panel to turn the radio, and touched the HV side, and really got zapped good. My hand got cooked a little, and I actually felt bad enough to go to the ER. By the time they got me in, I was feeling fine, so it was a waste of a couple hundred bucks it cost me for the visit.

I wish I had your BP.

I spent 30 years working on tube amplifiers, up to about 35,000 Vdc on some of them. I have never had an electric shock because when I work with electricity I concentrate. Same level of concentration as driving or shooting guns. Zero defects, zero tolerance.

Many years ago, I read somewhere that smart electricians (the ones who want to live to be a ripe old age) always put one hand behind their back when they are working on high voltage things.That is suppose to be so they won't fry/zap both of the main arteries going to their heart.
When I was a kid, we used to dare other kids to stick their fingers into a light bulb socket.That was the first time I got zapped, about sixty something years ago.

How did that old 1950s/1960s tv rice commercial go?
Mahatma - Gindra (Gindra, sompin or the other) Long Grain Rice!

Bleached white rice we exported to Vietnam was one of our sekert weapons in the Vietnam Conflict, (some people call it the Vietnam War.Korea was a Police Action) because bleached white rice has very little nutrional value.Those Vietnamese people who worked for up/with us at the ammo dump a few miles North of the Tan Son Nhut North gate, they used to bring a lump of bleached white rice (sometimes with a cooked egg with the bleached white rice) wrapped in newspaper with them for their dinner.I used to drive a 2 1/2 ton Army truck to the Main Gate (they walked through a smaller gate by the Main Gate, after getting their ID cards checked) in the mornings after chow and pick them up.

Merits of Islam in the Relationship Between Men &Women
I am happy to be a member of this group and I consider you my friends. As a friend , I like to share with you some thoughts that I believe will be useful for your life.

Merits of Islam in the Relationship Between Men &Women

1- Islam encourages marriage to prevent committing adultery, and considers marriage to be one of the ways of the Messengers;The Messenger of Allah (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) said: “O young people, whoever among you can afford to get married, let him do so, for it helps one to lower the gaze and protect the private parts (i.e., remain chaste). Whoever cannot afford it, let him fast, for it is a protection for him.” 2- If a man wants to get married but is unable to spend on a wife, then he should adhere to the words of Allah. 24:33 “And let those who find not the financial means for marriage keep themselves chaste, until Allâh enriches them of His Bounty”
3- Islam urges people to get married, and prohibits celibacy and castration. It is forbidden to forego getting married even if the intention is to devote oneself to worship. “There is no monasticism in Islam.” because they are against his nature, and against having children.

4- Islam forbids adultery for the sake of reserving lineages, and to prevent unlawful pregnancies and social problems.17: 32. And come not near to the unlawful sexual intercourse. Verily, it is a Fâhishah [i.e. anything that transgresses its limits (a great sin)], and an evil way (that leads one to Hell unless Allâh forgives him).

5- Islam forbids accusing others of adultery and considers it a great sin. 24: 15. When you were propagating it with your tongues, and uttering with your mouths that whereof you had no knowledge, you counted it a little thing, while with Allâh it was very great.

6- Islam prohibits a man to be alone with a woman who is not a relative he can’t marry, because that causes temptation to do immoral and evil actions. The Prophet (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) said: “No man is alone with a (non-mahram) woman but the Satan is the third one present.”

7- Islam forbids unlawful sexual relationships and marrying a woman not chaste.5: 5. Made lawful to you this day are AtTayyibât [all kinds of Halâl (lawful) foods, which Allâh has made lawful (meat of slaughtered eatable animals, etc., milk products, fats, vegetables and fruits, etc.). The food (slaughtered cattle, eatable animals, etc.) of the people of the Scripture (Jews and Christians) is lawful to you and yours is lawful to them. (Lawful to you in marriage) are chaste women from the believers and chaste women from those who were given the Scripture (Jews and Christians) before your time.

Those who put a high value on words may recoil at the title of Jonah Goldberg's new book, "Liberal Fascism." As a result, they may refuse to read it, which will be their loss -- and a major loss.

Those who value substance over words, however, will find in this book a wealth of challenging insights, backed up by thorough research and brilliant analysis.

This is the sort of book that challenges the fundamental assumptions of its time -- and which, for that reason, is likely to be shunned rather than criticized.

Because the word "fascist" is often thrown around loosely these days, as a general term of abuse, it is good that "Liberal Fascism" begins by discussing the real Fascism, introduced into Italy after the First World War by Benito Mussolini.

The Fascists were completely against individualism in general and especially against individualism in a free market economy. Their agenda included minimum wage laws, government restrictions on profit-making, progressive taxation of capital, and "rigidly secular" schools.

Unlike the Communists, the Fascists did not seek government ownership of the means of production. They just wanted the government to call the shots as to how businesses would be run.

They were for "industrial policy," long before liberals coined that phrase in the United States.

Indeed, the whole Fascist economic agenda bears a remarkable resemblance to what liberals would later advocate.

Moreover, during the 1920s "progressives" in the United States and Britain recognized the kinship of their ideas with those of Mussolini, who was widely lionized by the left.

Famed British novelist and prominent Fabian socialist H.G. Wells called for "Liberal Fascism," saying "the world is sick of parliamentary politics."

Another literary giant and Fabian socialist, George Bernard Shaw, also expressed his admiration for Mussolini -- as well as for Hitler and Stalin, because they "did things," instead of just talk. In Germany, the Nazis followed in the wake of the Italian Fascists, adding racism in general and anti-semitism in particular, neither of which was part of Fascism in Italy or in Franco's Spain.

Even the Nazi variant of Fascism found favor on the left when it was only a movement seeking power in the 1920s.

W.E.B. DuBois was so taken with the Nazi movement that he put swastikas on the cover of a magazine he edited, despite complaints from Jewish readers.

Even after Hitler achieved dictatorial power in Germany in 1933, DuBois declared that the Nazi dictatorship was "absolutely necessary in order to get the state in order."

As late as 1937 he said in a speech in Harlem that "there is today, in some respects, more democracy in Germany than there has been in years past."

In short, during the 1920s and the early 1930s, Fascism was not only looked on favorably by the left but recognized as having kindred ideas, agendas and assumptions.

Only after Hitler and Mussolini disgraced themselves, mainly by their brutal military aggressions in the 1930s, did the left distance themselves from these international pariahs.

Fascism, initially recognized as a kindred ideology of the left, has since come down to us defined as being on "the right" -- indeed, as representing the farthest right, supposedly further extensions of conservatism.

If by conservatism you mean belief in free markets, limited government, and traditional morality, including religious influences, then these are all things that the Fascists opposed just as much as the left does today.

The left may say that they are not racists or anti-semites, like Hitler, but neither was Mussolini or Franco. Hitler, incidentally, got some of his racist ideology from the writings of American "progressives" in the eugenics movement.

Jonah Goldberg's "Liberal Fascism" http://www.amazon.com/Liberal-Fascism-American-Mussolini-Politics/dp/0767917189/is too rich a book to be summarized in a newspaper column. Get a copy and start re-thinking the received notions about who is on "the left" and who is on "the right." It is a book for people who want to think, rather than repeat rhetoric.

this is nothing more than right wing propagandists trying to redefine terms. Like they made liberal a bad word. Marx was right. It all comes down to class warfare. Either we let the ultra wealthy conservatives hide behind their corporations and run the government for their own personal benefit, or we let the people run the government for the benefit of all. Fascism is the ultra wealthy controlling the government. Liberalism has attempted to take that control back and put it in the hands of The People. Such was the purpose of The US Constitution. A very liberal document by the way.

Let me pour in a new flavor and stir the pot. Women are taking over. Their use of the language is less academic and more accepting of the ambiguity of people, their ideologies, and organizations. However, they too suffer from group think and even worse political correctness.

But consider where the rubber actually hits the road, in a court hearing for sanity, where they can present the drivel of insane rants to prove that a deviant thinker needs meds and better case management. It will not matter whether the government thinks it is liberal, conservative, or for that matter, fascist.

This is not a trial by jury. You dont get an attorney. They get to pick the judge. If you respond with flaming rather than polite discourse of ideas you do not like, they will suggest this is typical for neurotics.

Women are more aware of how men will corrupt any system you can design in order to get the perks and money for status symbols hoping for more sex with younger more attractive hotties.

The history of matriarchic political and economic systems is obscure largely because patriarchic academia went along with what the scribes in the pay of an alpha male military elite wanted recorded. But whether the system was more socialistic or more capitalistic, we see a lower cost of management with relatively better conditions for the lower classes.

I have yet to see anything in the line of a portable TV that receives ATSC.
Thing about a radio to receive the audio is that unlike the split carriers of a System M signal, there is no separate audio carrier to receive. You would have to receive and decode the entire digital signal just to get the audio.. may as well have a video display on your portable.

BTW, I do not count those 7-9" sets you can use in your camper that run off of 12V "portables." For it to be a true portable, it needs to have at least an accessory external battery pack, and preferably internal batteries.

Trying to decide between Sony ICF-SW7600GR and Grundig G5.
Suggestions?

I hear that G5 has better speaker while 7600GR has better sensitivity.

Nothing broken but very swollen sure hurts. Week or two in the great chair with the PDA, iPod and Laptop if I have room in my lap.

EKG was OK, have the blood test results tomorrow and chest X-ray was ok.
Just got to take it easy, can't walk.

When I hurt my knee, I spent a lot of time with my scanners, reprogramming them, and entering alpha tags on everything. But the first week or so, the pain pills made doing anything but sitting there zoning out, difficult. But without them, I was miserable.

Is that so!?

But American industrialists like Henry Ford and Prescott Bush (Dubya' grandpappy) stuck with the Nazis much longer. In fact, Dubya' grandpappy almost went to prison for events that culminated in action under the Trading with the Enemy Act.

until his company's assets were seized in 1942 under the Trading with the Enemy Act, has led more than 60 years later to a civil action for damages being brought in Germany against the Bush family by two former slave labourers at Auschwitz.

American industrialists; The DuPont Family, the Remmington Family, and JP Morgan tried to assasinate FDR and put a Hitler style fascist state in place. They hired General Smedley Butler to lead the overthrow, but he turned them in.
These industrialists aided the Nazis in various ways until 1951, with Nazi multimillionaire Fritz Thyssen as their partner and cohort. Bush recieved $1.5 million from the proceeds of Thyssen's death in that year, which was the start of the Bush family fortune.

Nope.
"The Night of the Long Knives (German:
De-Nacht_der_langen_Messer.ogg Nacht der langen Messer (help•info)) or "Operation Hummingbird", was a purge that took place in Nazi Germany between June 30 and July 2, 1934, when the Nazi regime carried out a series of political executions."

That was when Hitler killed off (among others) all vestiges and connections he had with the socialists and the leftists in his party, and to conciliate leaders of the Reichswehr, the official German military. From then on, the Nazis were a pure Republican...I mean Right Wing Party.

"During the 1920s and 1930s, the SA functioned as a private militia that Hitler used to intimidate rivals and disrupt the meetings of competing political parties, especially those of the Social Democrats and the Communists. Also known as the "brownshirts" or "stormtroopers", the SA became notorious for their street battles with the Communists.[8] "

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Night_of_the_Long_Knives

"The month of September 1930 marked a turning point in the road that was leading the Germans inexorably toward the Third Reich.
The nazi party promised to lead the German people away from communism, socialism, trade-unionism, and the futility's of democracy."
-- The Rise and Fall of the Third Reich p.199

> Fascism, initially recognized as a kindred ideology of the left,

From "World Book Encyclopedia", 1958, p. 5467:

The name National Socialist German Workers Party does not correctly describe the Nazi movement. It was neither socialist nor organized for the benefit of workers. The name was apparently developed in an effort to win the support of the working classes....

Nazism was only a part of of the broad social movement known as Fascism which gained millions of supporters in many countries during the 1930's....

The industrialists gave financial support to the party because they thought the Nazis would protect them from from socialism and communism, and from the increasing strength of the labor unions.

Synopsis from World Book 1958:
Fascism's parts:
1) extreme nationalism, 2) police state, 3) cultivation

I know the feeling. It hurts but what gets me is it won't do what I tell it to.

taking the load of that foot.

Well, it'll get better.

Right now, The Sony's sync detection makes it slightly better. IMHO, the G5/E5/DE1103 (all really the same radio) has better sensitivity and audio, though. That's why so many of us are waiting to try the new G3 that's due out next month. The G3 will add sync to the G5 - possibly producing a better alternative.

Many also promote the Sony as being of better quality. The 7600GR that I've owned for about a year, though, is already losing the SSB/sync detection to an internal parts failure. The E5 I've owned for about 2.5 years and it seems to be doing fine.

There is no such thing as "liberal fascism". This is just another attempt by the right wing to get out of their own problem. They started fascism, they kept it going. The right wing was sympathetic to fascist and Nazis before WWII. The right wing supported anti-semites. And the right wing hasn't changed all that much.

Yeah, they have re-hung curtains, re-done the closets but the core of freedom hating, fear causing is what ran the repug party in the past and runs it today.

Actually Mike, that list gets updated on an almost daily basis.

Yes, thanks for pointing that out.

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia Friedrich "Fritz" Thyssen (November 9, 1873, M�lheim an der Ruhr February 8, 1951, Buenos Aires) was a German businessman born into one of Germany's leading industrial families.

...In September 1, 1939 World War II broke out. Thyssen sent Hermann G�ring a telegram saying he was opposed to the war, shortly before leaving for Switzerland with his family. He was expelled from the Nazi Party and the Reichstag, and his company was briefly nationalised. It was returned to other members of the Thyssen family some years after the war. In 1940 Thyssen took refuge and moved to France, intending to emigrate to Argentina, but was caught by the German occupation of France while he was visiting his ill mother in Belgium. He was arrested by Vichy France and taken back to Germany, where he was confined, first in a sanatorium near Berlin, then from 1943 in Sachsenhausen concentration camp. His wife Amelie instead of escaping to Argentina joined her husband and spent the whole war in the concentration camp with her husband. "She had spent the good times with her husband and would also join him in the difficult times.[citation needed]" In February, 1945 he was sent to Dachau concentration camp. He was comparatively well-treated and transferred to Tyrol in late April 1945 together with other prominent inmates, where the SS left the prisoners behind. He was liberated by the Fifth U.S. Army on May 5, 1945[5].

....Thyssen was nevertheless tried for being a supporter of the Nazi Party. He did not deny that he had been a Nazi supporter until 1938, and he accepted responsibility for his companies' mistreatment of Jewish employees in the 1930s, although he denied involvement in the employment of slave labour during the war.
Thyssen agreed to pay 500,000 Deutschmarks as compensation to those who suffered as a result of his actions, and was acquitted of other charges.

At least two posts on this on the 7600GR Yahoo group in the past two weeks. Check it out.

http://groups.yahoo.com/group/7600GR/message/4825

SSB signals can't be completely clarified into intelligible speech. Lost the ability to tune a broadcast signal in selectable ECSS, as can easily be done, usually. Loses sync lock easily when in sync mode, makes a lots of tonal noise (howling) around the loss of sync.

Interestingly, no problems at all with my 14 year old Sony 7600G.

I've been busy playing with a Radio Shack DX-390 the past few days. Makes me miss my old DX-440, which I gave to my brother years ago. I may have to pick one of those up on eBay...

Have a happy day, RHF!

Yeah, I read that article, yesterday. Any idea of the exact model number of the National Panasonic portable pictured in the article? I've never seen one like that before, but I'd like to add one to my collection.

Thanks for the info, Steve. The three lists I tend to use the most are EiBi (I appreciate your announcements!), HFCC and the Bi-List. Are there others that you think supplement those three?

Thanks for your opinion,

It's also easy to copy and paste that list into a Comma Separated Value (CSV) spreadsheet page, using the 'import' feature.

That way, you can move the columns around to suit whatever radio you have that can use a database listing.

One of the things that characterizes Sony's foray into SMD construction is an eerily consistent and predictable SMD electrolytic failure. This results in all sorts of things. Top of the list howling on AM, sometimes SSB.

"Grundig" radios (not made by, or even with the involvement of Grundig AG, in most cases) seem not to develop this problem.

One of the great advantages touted by Sony advocates is the sync detector, often hammered by Larry "The Greatest Shortwave Radio Ever Made" Magne as an indispensible necessity to shortwave listening.

These two items taken together give you what? Great radios that reliably fail almost on a schedule. And Sony service is an experience that would drive a Zen Master to a clock tower with a 30-06.

Compare to the Lex-Tecs-Pass-dig-sahn specials marketed under the Grundig handle these days. Better sound. Decent sensitivity, lower failure rate, less sophisticated detection.

It looks pretty much either/or.

Until you consider that sensitivity is only a practical issue up to a threshold. Reception on the lower HF bands, especially, is limited more by atmospheric noise than sensitivity. Nearly every radio has the sensitivity. It's the noise that kills you. And the more sensitive your radio is, the more noise you're going to hear. And the ratio of desired signal to atmospheric noise on the same antenna is going to be the same no matter the sensitivity. So, look at raw sensitivity as secondary priority. Only a few radios lack meaningful sensitivity. The 'Grundig' YB 500 and its clones and variants is an example of an amazingly deaf radio. It's in the minority.

And, even in that case, if you need more input to the radio, use more antenna.

The sync issue seems to be the biggest issue, here. Some will tell you not to buy a radio without it. Truth is, it's a useful tool. Like a selection of filters. But it's not the be-all and the end-all of radio detection. I have it on many of my radios. I use it sparingly. You can often do as well using ECSS and a selection of filters as many can with sync. I've found passband tuning to be far more useful than sync. And in many cases, liberal use of PBT precludes decent sync lock anyway.

So, it really is an either/or.

And YOUR priorities are going to determine the outcome of this decision. Not anyone's advice. Not anyone's numbers. You need to decide what your primary listening interests are. Select a radio that meets them. In YOUR location. That can't be overstated. Some radios benefit from higher dynamic range to avoid overload in high signal areas. If you don't have high signal levels in your area, you don't need to worry about overload, its artifacts, and it's real listening consequences.

The best advice: Go listen to a lot of radios. Listen to them in your area. Get a real feel for what you like, and what you don't like. And when you find something you like that does what you need it to do, screw the all the advice, screw all the numbers, and buy it.

Buy what you want, and you'll never experience buyer's remorse.

Like everything else in the article, it as the WaPO often does, it has no basis in fact. The diatribe about ham radio operators was totaly off base and unfounded, the (alleged) spies never transmitted, they only received transmissions from Cuba.

As for the type of radio pictured, the picture came from the WikiPedia, and had nothing to do with the one they used.

Very well put, Peter. I have emphasized several of your points in threads were I have defended the Eton E5 as being a better receiver for my purposes than the Sony7600GR. I've also had SMD problems with both a Sony 2010 and an SW77.

My favorite implementation of sync has probably been my Grundig SAT800 and Eton E1XM (definitely related to Grundig design), and in both I probably do more DXing in ECSS mode as opposed to sync. The PBT on the E1 is probably used 20X more than I use the sync function.

How you been doing lately, Peter?

To be exact:

Though the WaPO does credit the WikiPedia as the source of the photo.

Yeah, and that article distorted SW listening less than many others did! Still, does anyone know the model number of that Panasonic? Looks like a Barlow-Wadley design...

If you go to the WikiPedia page, you can track down the person who took the photograph. I have no idea of how to contact him to ask, but maybe someone who contributes to the WikiPedia does.

If you do, please mention that it would be appreciated if the model of the radio shown was added to the caption.

Well, you may be also aware of the Prime Time SW list?

Along with Glenn Hauser's site that's probably the best there is.

Yeah, mine wouldn't co-operate for about 6 weeks. My thigh muscles were locked up tight, and I had to put my left foot behind my right when I drove. I could turn it between the gas and brake, and push them ok, but I couldn't lift up my leg the normal way at all. When it "let go" on the way home from work one morning, it was like a switch got thrown. I could suddenly lift my leg up normally. It still felt weird though.

> Funny I use my right foot to move my left foot. Every thing hurting from

I stretched out my Achilles tendon, and all the ligaments in my foot too. It looked impressive, and hurt slightly, but my knee was amazingly bad looking. I've shown pics of it to doctors and nurses and they all react with shock when I tell them it was all due to a stumble. They said it looked as if I had either been in a bad car wreck, or had fallen from a couple stories up. It's been a long ordeal, and I'm pretty frustrated at this point, almost 2 years later.

> Well, it'll get better.

I keep saying that. My knee ignores me for the most part.

Seriously, it will, but you will probably get frustrated with the pace of improvement. You're about 10 years older than I am, so it will take even longer for healing to take place. My issues at this point involve nerves, not muscles or tendons. When I fell, the impact point was right where the doctor taps it with the little hammer to check your reflexes.
My knee feels like bugs are crawling inside it sometimes, other times, it feels like electric shocks, and like it's partially asleep. Really, really annoying.

Manually. My laptop and the cable were in a non-friendly to my knee room, and it was too uncomfortable there, and dragging the laptop out was a bigger hassle than just punching the stuff in by hand. The chair I spent my time in wasn't good for PC use either.

The worst thing was I dumped the one scanner to my PC after I had it all set up, and then after I had to reset it when it locked up, the dump file wouldn't load! I had to use one of my earlier ones to get it going again, and redo the rest. At least it was only about 40 freqs, not about 350 or so, the total I had in it.

Well, if you followed them, you would notice some posts go for days, close to a week without a response, so it only makes sense to post the whole thing, just so people know what you're replying to.

It pisses me off when people cut so much out of a post to the point of making the post totally nonsensical unless you just happen to remember it, or the thread has it in another post.

Just listening to the Sony and the Grundig G5- the Grundig has better sound . The Grundig also has a much larger memory (700 vs. 100 for the Sony). I find the single sideband better on the Sony by far. The sony also has synch detection for AM listening. I would compare a Grundig G3 to a Sony 7600 GR when the Grundig arrives in July of this year (hopefully).

Shortwave radio is a remnant of an era that existed before the Internet and satellite communications, including the sophisticated eavesdropping equipment of the National Security Agency.

It's the National Panasonic 3000. Sold originally for $595.

> What do you use to create a (CSV) spreadsheet ?

1) Open the web page with the frequency list.

2) From the 'Edit' menu on top of the web browser, select 'Select all' and 'Copy' or just 'Copy All'. if there is no 'copy all', then selected all the page with your mouse button. Then copy.

3) Open a small wordrocessor, like Notepad in Windows or Gedit in Linux and paste the contents you have copied into the new document.
Save the new file with whatever name you want.

4) Open your spreadsheet and find 'import' in the menus. Import the wordprocessing file you have just saved as a CSV file.

5) You should now have a proper spreadsheet, with multiple rows and columns. Whole columns may be selected and copied and then repasted into a new sheet. All the radios seem to need a different order and number of columns.

Good luck with the project. Let us know how it goes.

The real advantage is using the sort function in Excel. You can sort three columns at a time like time, frequency, and station.

The "find all" function is also a great tool.

There were Six Stooges.One time about nine years ago, I was watching an old Fatty Arbuckle movie on tv.I emailed that married Irish woman wayyyyy over yonder across the big pond.I asked her if she has ever heard of Fatty Arbuckle.She said,,, Damn right!

Way back in the olden days, Arbuckle coffee company used to include a stick of peppermint candy in each bag of Arbuckle coffee.Out there on the Cattle Drives, the cook used to say, Who wants to grind the coffee?

HT's have some very annoying programming steps on a lot of them, due to Uniden and GRE wanting royalties on practically everything having to do with scanners. I have a Yaesu VX-170 right now, great train radio, and I don't have much programmed in it, just a few repeaters and railband stuff. My VX-5 annoyed the hell out of me, and I put it on Ebay. I don't like the audio on it much, but the intermod it got almost everywhere in town just made it useless, along with the lockups it had, so off it went. Best HT I ever had was the Icom 24AT I had for like 15 years.

Amazing railband and UHF reception, but lousy audio. The VX-170 is almost as good on railband, and the audio is 10X as good as the Icom was.

- Shows you the republican owned press...
- Rush can make jokes at dem's children but never the other way around

Quotations Please _____________
Rush's Jokes are Jokes.

Letterman's Perversion is Perversion :
'Rape' & 'Knock-Up' a 14 Year Old Girl

Letterman's Sexism is Sexist to the Extreme :
'Slutty Airline Stewardess' demeaning to all Women and the Profession of Airline Stewardess which is mostly staffed by Women. {Naturally NOW was Silent}

Letterman is Crude as Crude can be because of both his Overt Sexism and Scripted Perversion.
* Pre-written by Letterman's Writers for TV
-and- They Did Not Get The Fact That It Was Not Funny.
* Rehearsed by Letterman prior to the TV performance
-and- He Did Not Get The Fact That It Was Not Funny.

REALITY CHECK :
Just 'imagine' David Letterman making similar remarks
about Micheal Obama an her daughters M* & S**
? Would anyone in the Media dare to put Micheal Obama's name in the same sentance as the word
'slut' ? {never would happen - they'd be beeped-out}

? Would anyone in the Media imply that Micheal Obama's dresses like an Airline Stewardess ?
{never would be allowed to happen}
? Would anyone in the Media put the Obama's Girls M and S names in the same sentence as the words Knock-Up and Rape ?
{never would be allowed to happen}
Conclusion - All of which Illustrates the Two Faces of the Liberal Media.

OMG - Had David Letterman Attacked the Obama Family in the same manner as the Palin Family :
Letterman Would Be Off-the-Air and Banned from TV in the USA by the Obama-Regime and place in a Mental Hospital for months or years [.]

that is the liberal media's political reality ~ RHF

You could also make a book on all the times a Bush worshiper called me an American hater or communist for being against his policies. They are politicians. They ARE NOT God's.
Get a life.

Governor Palin does dress like a slut. She comes from the meth capital of Alaska. Levi's mom sells drugs. Bristol was the subject of the joke. Bristol is a slut who got "knocked up" by a hockey player, then got paraded around by the right wing, thereby becoming a public figure and fodder for comedy.

I do use a real newsreader, but I don't keep the threads going back far enough for what the poster is talking about after a certain point. If I want to see them, I can, but I don't really want the hassle. Posting the whole deal is easier. And unless someone is on dialup, what's the point of cutting a hundred lines or so of post?

A few questions from an ignorant layman:

I've heard of terms such as 'galactic noise', 'solar noise', and 'cosmic microwave background'. From what I've been told, CMB can be heard as the static between stations. What about the other two? In fact, what are they? Do they affect reception? Are they easily identifiable?

Also, what other 'extra terrestrial' phenonema can be heard on the average receiver? (Besides ET calling home!) Can the aurora borealis or meteorites be heard?

What's the use? Good netiquette, and less recursion, less waste of screen real estate, and less repetitive motion (kbd, mouse). Proper snipping and inclusion of quotations with interleaved new text makes for better comprehension. I'm with the O.P. on this; sometimes I will skip a message if it includes all of the previous messages in the thread as a quotation. A general rule of thumb is that a message should include all of the necessary references by quotation to be intelligible and no more.

Do a net search on "amateur radio astronomy" for lots of material describing emissions and how to detect them.

Certainly they affect propagation; hams have worked aurora skip on high bands for years, and meteor scatter systems were used during the cold war for data transmission in areas without infrastructure.

When Jupiter has strong active magnetic storms, they can be heard on a variety of bands using a variety of modes; years ago during a particularly strong period, characteristic sounds of these emissions could be heard on ordinary FM radios (in a quiet part of the band).

Life goes on. Contrary to what the site says, there is no appreciable movement of any kind within the ROK. We're out in the world pretty much every day. We have seen some security training activity, but it's been restricted to the localities of some bases north of Seoul, with no troop or materiel movements thusfar. Our threatcon level remains at B, where it's been since 9/13/2001 local time.

You have never seen a more placid people than the South Koreans. After 56 years of a "cease fire" and after many instances of the same sort of sabre rattling as is going on now, they have come to realize that Jong-il Kim's behavior is much like that of a toddler trying to get the attention of the adults in the room. This may sound complacent, but trust me, the ROK military is anything but complacent.

I know what you are saying B.A. and I believe everything you said. But sooner or later, that nut job is going to launch.

We shall see. A lot can happen between now and when the sun comes up

Make no mistake about it, the McCain WILL be interesting.

FWIW B.A. do you and/or neighbors have a

Millions of people have jobs in the service industries. They show up for work on time and do their jobs to the best of their abilities. Most of them even put up with the juvenile insults of insecure fatheads.

First you insult the brand of radios used by members of this newsgroup, now you seem to want to put people into a sub-class based on employment.

I have a lot more respect for the person flipping burgers to get a pay cheque than I do for leeches living off public funds due to unprovable soft tissue injuries.

All the leeches I've seen actually think the money is 'owed' to them and them alone. The other guy needing help is a communist.

A hint, I'm a grown up, Telmundoh. Calling me gay doesn't really accomplish a lot, except show just how weird you're becoming. Not that He's about the easiest kooktard there has ever been to bite. Get ready to be called gay. I wonder when he's going to drop the "F- bomb"?

Shouldn't be too much longer...

His kooktard religion is strong. It's going to take something big to shake it and allow him to make a small step towards normalcy.

Telamon's "Most Retarded Posts in One Month" Challenge June 2009

Telamon,

With 71 Posts out of a Total of 227 to this point :
Telamon You {yourself} are leading the way to claiming the Title {Crown} of the Poster with the :
"Most Retared Posts in One Month"

You Set A Goal* : You Are Achieving It ! [At-A-Boy :<]
* Some did claim that the outcome was a forgone conclusion; considering your expertise in the field.

But you should give BDK and John Barnard some credit for egging you on toward excellence in Posting this outstanding volume of truly "Retarded Posts".

? Is 'excellence in' and 'Retard Posts' sort of a {Conceptually} Oxymoron ?

Anyway Thanks Again Telamon for showing 'us' just how-it-is-done; and thanks too to BDK and John Barnard for showing 'us' how-to-get-it-done.

done-is-done -but- good-and-done is better ~ RHF

- Wrong daughter.

Did not matter "She" was a 'Right' Target for a Letterman Attack at a "Right' Politician's Family.

- Letterman can be crass but he doesn't
- tend to joke about statutory rape.

Letterman was not Joking : Letterman Was Attacking.

And you damn well know he meant the older daughter.

Here Is What We "Damn Well Know" :

1 - What David Leterman Said on his Show.
* Pre-written by Letterman's Writers for TV
-and- They Did Not Get The Fact That It Was Not Funny.
-oops- None of the Writers check 'which' of the Palin Daughters was traveling with Sarah ?

2 - We Know When David Letterman Said It.
* Rehearsed by Letterman prior to the TV performance
-and- He Did Not Get The Fact That It Was Not Funny.
-d'oh- Letterman himself did not check 'which' of the Palin Daughters was traveling with Sarah ?

your right Burr. back in the day, the ROK's were some of the best fighters i worked with. but, the guys from OZ were the most fun. beer and cards, best of the best.

Is that the same Corps of Engineers that wrecked New Orleans? Yeah, they deserve respect. Right.

But it was funny. Bristol touting "abstinence only" birth control is funny squared. Your humbrage is a hoot as well.

Telamon, I have a question. Why, in your opinion, is someone "stupid" if they don't use a newsreader?

I've always wanted to ask you and others in other groups that. I never did understand that thinking.
Just asking.:-)

I feel sorry for that DX Ass guy!

It was pretty hairy around here with about 8 inches of rain in rather rapid fashion. Also saw more lightning and heard more thunder than I have for quite awhile.

I can still hear some big generators running about a half mile from here as they work to restore power and try to get a lot of backed up sewers fixed.

Sunny now though, and quite a few days of good weather forecast.

I fixing to get out and about to take a look around.

IBiquity hasn’t demonstrated consumer or broadcaster acceptance but in every way has inflated and distorted statistics in an attempt to give the perception to the FCC and the world that their digital radio system is on the verge of a consumer explosion. IBiquity HD radio has been around several years with essentially zero growth. To allow them a free Government handout in the form of a power increase is an injustice to broadcasters and consumers. IBiquity Digital Corporation should be allowed to fail or succeed based on the original concept of letting consumers and manufacturers decide. Not on a handout from the FCC.

They must have believed that at current power levels consumers would welcome it because they spent millions in past years on advertising and other promotional gimmicks. Now, when there’s solid evidence that consumers and broadcasters don’t want it they petition for a power increase? I challenge iBiquity to prove the need for a power increase based on solid evidence of consumer acceptance.

Islamic Speakers Bureau Backed By Radical Profs

A California nonprofit dedicated to "teaching about Islam & Muslims" at U.S. high schools and college campuses features a board of advisors that is stacked with some of the most controversial activist professors in the field of Middle Eastern studies today. The imprimatur of these scholars may signal a troubling shift toward the support of proselytizing efforts and the further unraveling of Middle East Studies in America.

Of late, there have been a number of articles and news reports labeling Sonia Sotomayor, the Supreme Court nominee, and her supporters as “leftwing” etc. There are times when the word

“communist” should be used; not the misleading word “leftwing”. The title of one such article could very well read: “Sotomayor’s Communist and Racist Connections,” instead of “Sotomayor's Leftwing and Racist Connections."

We have got to start calling a spade a spade. We should not be afraid of the "C" word! If writers, commentators and reporters would dig just a little deeper, they would find that essentially these so-called "left-wing" groups such as ACORN and LaRaza are Communist and or Communist front organizations.

I have spent the last 47 years studying Communist tactics and methods, and dealing directly with communists and communist fronts such as, the Students for A Democratic Society (SDS), the Progressive Labor Party, the Mobilization Committee to End the War in Vietnam, Hands off Latin America, African National Congress, etc. I have met and dealt with such communists as Herbert Aptheker, one time historian and theoratician of the Communist Party USA and member of its national committee; folk singer Pete Seeger, Moscow's song bird; James Scully, head of the International Committee Against Racism; and even Angela Davis, member of the communist Black Panther Party.

My point being that I have dealt enough with communist organizations and individuals, to be able to recognize them when I see them.

http://www.jbs.org

On April 16, the Board of Trustees at the College of DuPage, a large community college in Illinois, made history by voting unanimously to adopt the Academic Bill of Rights and include it in the school’s policy manual, making DuPage the first campus in the nation to have adopted the actual text of the Academic Bill of Rights and only the third campus to recognize student-specific academic freedom protections. But the teachers unions, understanding the threat the Academic Bill Rights posed to their political agendas on the DuPage campus, were ready for this development and engineered the installation of a new Board to reverse this decision on May 4, a scant two weeks after DuPage had committed itself to academic freedom.

The NEA, which has opposed scholarships for inner city black and Hispanic children and has fought the Academic Bill of Rights since its introduction over half a decade ago, had seen the victory of the Academic Bill of Rights coming. It had poured $100,000 into the community college trustee election on March 7, and succeeded in gaining a four-seat majority on the DuPage Board of Trustees. On May 4, only days after being seated, the four new union-backed trustees voted to rescind the months-long work of the previous board (which NEA sympathizers had tried to stigmatize as “a lame duck board”), culminating in the April 16 vote. Kory Atkinson, a member of the previous board who helped to pass the Bill, commented: “The decision by the new College of DuPage board to rescind the Academic Bill of Rights is nothing more than the exercise of raw political power. The faculty union poured over $100,000 into recent board elections and essentially bought 4 board members. It is noteworthy that the Board voted to rescind its ABOR policy by a 4-3 vote, and that each of the 4 trustees voting to rescind the policy received all of their campaign contributions, totaling tens of thousands of dollars apiece, from the faculty union."

The quick reversal should not come as a surprise to anyone familiar with the history of the Academic Bill of Rights at DuPage. An intense power struggle over the Bill's adoption has been ongoing since last fall when it was first publicly announced that the DuPage Board of Trustees was considering including the Bill among several revisions to the campus policy manual. Aided by the national teachers unions and left-leaning academic associations, the DuPage Faculty Association coordinated an underhanded and manipulative disinformation campaign against the Bill in the local and national media, falsely claiming that it would "give elected officials the power to dictate what theories, data and critical interpretations would be allowed in a classroom"—an absurd charge given that it was the university's own trustees who initiated these reforms.

Additionally, a letter sent by the Faculty Association to the Board of Trustees last winter claimed in Orwellian language that the Bill has "political connotations" (it is in fact designed to remove politics from the curriculum) and that "ABOR supporters apparently hope that the bill will give elected officials the power to dictate, for example, whether creationism should be taught alongside evolution in college biology" (a flat out lie).

The Faculty Association was joined in these attacks by the Illinois Community College Faculty Association and the Illinois chapter of the American Association of University Professors which is the chief opponent of the academic freedom campaign. The AAUP claimed that the proposed policy changes including the Academic Bill of Rights represented "an extraordinary attack on academic freedom, shared governance, and intellectual liberty" and sought to discredit Academic Bill of Rights author David Horowitz as a "controversial polemicist." The term "shared governance" as interpreted by the AAUP is a doctrine under which professors are accountable to no one but themselves for what goes on in the classroom.

In fact, the Academic Bill of Rights bears little resemblance to the caricatures created by the leftwing teacher unions and their faculty spokesmen. It ensures political neutrality in the classroom, and does not require the teaching of any doctrine. The exact language of the ABOR states that "Exposing students to the spectrum of significant scholarly viewpoints on the subjects examined in their courses is a major responsibility of faculty." Any controversies as to what constitutes a scholarly viewpoint would be resolved by the college, not by politicians.

The provisions in the Academic Bill of Rights are drawn explicitly from the classic academic freedom statements of the American Association of University Professors (AAUP) in the days before it became a radical organization. These statements have been embraced by universities across the country, though there is currently little enforcement of their tenets as regards students. The Academic Bill of Rights guarantees the rights of both faculty and students to academic freedom regardless of their political or religious views. It prohibits discrimination in hiring, firing and promotion of faculty based on political or religious beliefs and forbids faculty from abusing their positions for the purposes of “political, ideological, religious or anti-religious indoctrination” in the classroom.

While the ABOR was being considered by the DuPage in the early spring, the Faculty Association claimed that not enough time had been allotted for public debate and consideration. But only days after the new members elected with union funds were seated, the new union board voted to rescind the ABOR without any opportunity for a public hearing. “This defeat shows that while the left is prepared to conduct a war to defend their campaign to indoctrinate America’s students in radical hogwash,” says David Horowitz, architect of the Academic Bill of Rights. “Ever since I first introduced the Bill of Rights in 2003, the teacher unions have conducted a campaign of misrepresentation and slander to protect their political agendas in the classroom. The actions of the incoming trustees at DuPage are not a commentary on the Bill so much as an illustration of how determined the left is to corrupt our universities and use them for their political ends. I am encouraged however, by the willingness of the previous courageous DuPage trustees to regroup for the next round of this battle.”

Despite the temporary setback, Board of Trustess member Kory Atkinson vows that the fight is not over: “The students and taxpayers of the College of DuPage district will not stand by while the faculty bought trustees place the interests of their faculty patrons above the interests of the students.”

Flipping burgers is an entry level job. You can't live off a minimum wage job so most people move on. The ugly Canadian is an exception to that as he is not capable of something better.

Thanks to Revi N. Nair for transcribing this talk from the 2004 Mises University.

I want to talk about some of the main objections that have been given to libertarian anarchism and my attempts to answer them. But before I start giving objections and trying to answer them, there is no point in trying to answer objections to a view unless you have given some positive reason to hold the view in the first place. So, I just want to say briefly what I think the positive case is for it before going on to defend it against objections.

THE CASE FOR LIBERTARIAN ANARCHISM

Problems with Forced Monopoly

Think about it this way. Whatï¿½s wrong with a shoe monopoly? Suppose that I and my gang are the only ones that are legally allowed to manufacture and sell shoes ï¿½ my gang and anyone else that I authorize, but nobody else. Whatï¿½s wrong with it? Well, first of all, from a moral point of view, the question is: why us? Whatï¿½s so special about us? Now in this case, because Iï¿½ve chosen me, it is more plausible that I ought to have that kind of monopoly, so maybe I should pick a different example! But still, you might wonder, where do I and my gang get off claiming this right to make and sell something that no one else has the right to make and sell, to provide a good or service no one else has the right to provide. At least as far as you know, Iï¿½m just another mortal, another human like unto yourselves (more or less). So, from a moral standpoint I have no more right to do it than anyone else.

Then, of course, from a pragmatic, consequentialist standpoint ï¿½ well, first of all, what is the likely result of my and my gang having a monopoly on shoes? Well, first of all, there are incentive problems. If Iï¿½m the only person who has the right to make and sell shoes, youï¿½re probably not going to get the shoes from me very cheaply. I can charge as much as I want, as long as I donï¿½t charge so much that you just canï¿½t afford them at all or you decide youï¿½re happier just not having the shoes. But as long as youï¿½re willing and able, Iï¿½ll charge the highest price that I can get out of you ï¿½ because youï¿½ve got no competition, nowhere else to go. You also probably shouldnï¿½t expect the shoes to be of particularly high quality, because, after all, as long as theyï¿½re barely serviceable, and you still prefer them to going barefoot ï¿½ then you have to buy them from me.

In addition to the likelihood that the shoes are going to be expensive and not very good, thereï¿½s also the fact that my ability to be the only person who makes and sells shoes gives me a certain leverage over you. Suppose that I donï¿½t like you. Suppose youï¿½ve offended me in some way. Well, maybe you just donï¿½t get shoes for a while. So, thereï¿½s also abuse-of-power issues.

But, itï¿½s just not the incentive problem, because, after all, suppose that Iï¿½m a perfect saint and I will make the best shoes I possibly can for you, and Iï¿½ll charge the lowest price I possibly can charge, and I wonï¿½t abuse my power at all. Suppose Iï¿½m utterly trustworthy. Iï¿½m a prince among men (not in Machiavelliï¿½s sense). There is still a problem, which is: how do I know exactly that Iï¿½m doing the best job I can with these shoes? After all, thereï¿½s no competition. I guess I could poll people to try to find out what kind of shoes they seem to want. But there are lots of different ways I could make shoes. Some of them are more expensive ways of making them, and some are less expensive. How do I know, given that thereï¿½s no market, and thereï¿½s really not much I can do in the way of profit and loss accounting? I just have to make guesses. So even if Iï¿½m doing my best, the quantity I make, the quality I make may not be best suited to satisfy peopleï¿½s preferences, and I have a hard time finding these things out.

Government Is a Forced Monopoly

So those are all reasons not to have a monopoly on the making and selling of shoes. Now, prima facie at least, it seems as though those are all good reasons for anyone not to have a monopoly in the provision of services of adjudicating disputes, and protecting rights, and all the things that are involved in what you might broadly call the enterprise of law. First of all thereï¿½s the moral question: why does one gang of people get the right to be the only ones in a given territory who can offer certain kinds of legal services or enforce certain kinds of things? And then there are these economic questions: what are the incentives going to be? Once again, itï¿½s a monopoly. It seems likely that with a captive customer base theyï¿½re going to charge higher prices than they otherwise would and offer lower quality. There might even be the occasional abuse of power. And then, even if you manage to avoid all those problems, and you get all the saintly types into the government, thereï¿½s still the problem of how do they know that the particular way that theyï¿½re providing legal services, the particular mix of legal services theyï¿½re offering, the particular ways they do it are really the best ones? They just try to figure out what will work. Since thereï¿½s no competition, they donï¿½t have much way of knowing whether what theyï¿½re doing is the most successful thing they could be doing.

So, the purpose of those considerations is to put the burden of proof on the opponent. So this is the point, then, when the opponent of competition in legal services has to raise some objections. (more)''

The email programs don't handle Usenet properly and are difficult or don't have at all useful features that most newsreaders have. Not unlike wearing ill fitting shoes.

There are free programs out there so there is no reason not to use a

The Facts

Fact 1
The flooding of New Orleans and nearby St. Bernard parish was a civil engineering disaster, not a weather event. According to a 2007 study by the American Society of Civil Engineers (ASCE), the majority of the damage from the flooding is due to the levees failing (page 39). ï¿½The failure of the levees was the worst engineering disaster in the world since Chernobylï¿½ says Dr. Ray Seed, Geotechnical Engineering, University of California Berkeley.

Fact 2
Responsibility for the design and construction of the flood protection in metro New Orleans belongs solely to the US Army Corps of Engineers as mandated in the Flood Control of 1965.

Fact 3
To look to Congress and the Army Corps to fix what it broke does not reflect on the last administration. The failure of the federally engineered levees was 40 years in the making. The Army Corps squandered hundreds of millions of dollars on a levee system they knew by their own calculations was inadequate.

Fact 4
More than 98% (ninety-eight percent) of the US Army Corps of Engineers are civilian employees. Thus to look to the Army Corps and Congress to fix what it broke does not disparage our young soldiers fighting in foreign wars.

Dump goes the kook'tard into the news group again.

I noticed both you and the ugly Canadian are an kook'tards.

Ok, I'll take a shot at an explanation so take the tin foil off you head for a moment as the constant crinkly noise is a distraction.

"Ahem"
As kook'tards the both of you "know things" that you can't know such as "knowing" what Letterman was thinking when he embarrassed himself on national TV. This is the biggest factor in embodying a kook'tard and is the basis of most of your posts.

You can put the tin foil back on your head now.

> You have a crush on Palin, or her daughter? That would be funny as hell.

Keep your pervert ideas out of this news group please.

The Web has Grown and Evolved while the UseNet has Not.

It's really a simple matter of those who used the usenet before the Advent of Google [older net users} -and- those who use Newsgroups after the Advent of Google {newer net users}

Newer Net Users are into "Web Destinations"

The E5/G5/DE1103 receivers are really better in a couple of major ways:

1. Smaller and lighter.
2. Better audio.
3. Far more advanced synthesizer circuitry, resulting in a significantly lower noise floor, making the radio seem super-sensitive.
4. A pretty good narrow filter. I used to think that the sync on the Sony gave it better ultimate selectivity, but side-by-side listening shows me that my E5/G5/DE1103s compete pretty well with the selectivity of the 7600G/GR.
5. A hell of a lot more memories than the Sony.

I look forward, of course, to owning a G3.

They are not really comparable that way. Usenet is designed for text and text alone. Always has been.

Now I will make a deal with you. I'll advocate taking binaries off of usenet if you start using a real newsreader, even if it's part of some

You seem to be the one who is interested in us getting a room, Telemundoh. What's that all about?

What did I say in the post above that's "stupid"? It's not a real grand jury, it has no power to do anything but get people who agree with them worked up about their "indictments".

But what would you know about reality anyway, after all, you believe Obama was born in Kenya.

Do you have the vanity plate "KUKTRD" on your car? You should.

And what evidence do you have he's a burger flipper? None? So what makes you think he's one?

So what jobs do I have? I have two. I have a bet with a friend who lurks as to what you'll say. Don't disappoint me, Telemundoh!

Oh, no fast food is involved with either one.

You're the one claiming I am, so yes it does. Playing the "gay" card is the last desperate play of losers and kooktards. I think you're a double dipper.

Sorry Telemundoh. I'm straight, and you calling me gay just proves how pitifully lame you are. Your Obama BC kooktardery showed that already anyway, but keep heaping it on, the laughs are always welcome.

This is the second dump you took in the news group today. All your lame posts will be answered here kook'tard.

You are a pervert. I used to think you were just deluded but it goes deeper than that. You need to go do something else to spew your crap-o-la. Go post this crap in alt.usenet.kooks.

We don't care for your "Tony Soprano" looks or your dog experiences or your love affair with the ugly Canadian. Again, go post this crap someplace else like in alt.usenet.kooks.

This news group doesn't need your 1,800 a month crap posts.

Yeah, you post stupid is the most polite way I could put it.

Just curious: are folks filtering out 'gignews.com' or 'supernews.com'?
Lately, in a number of newsgroups, I have received no replies and yet others who posted nearly identical responses did receive replies (but posted using other NNTP servers).

Some time ago I noticed threads that suggested some tendency to blanket filter on the above NNTP providers.

REALITY CHECK in some areas the City of New Orleans has [Weak Low] Flood Walls NOT [High Strong] Levees http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/File:New_Orleans_Elevations.jpg http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Levee
* Much of the City of New Orleans is below Water [Sea] Level and is naturally subject to Flooding.
* Federal Money designated for Flood Protection was diverted by the City of New Orleans and the State of Louisiana for other uses.

* In some areas the building of High Strong Levees was blocked by the City of New Orleans and the State of Louisiana because they take up land and would have displaced people; so only Weak Low Flood Walls were built since 1965 [LBJ].

Great, now you can sell the van and mow the grass on the shoulders of

stands. Much better than most of the supermarket produce. I have a stand just down the street I can walk to to get the fresh produce.

And tell your banker before she gets too aroused by the new digital TV to enjoy it while she can. Part of the "magic" of the new TV system is that it will be restrictive and she will probably soon discover that she may not be able to record her favorite soap operas or Superbowl games. One of the reasons for cramming this system down our throats is to accomplish the same thing that Bill Gates did with Microsoft software.

I'm not the one:

1. Imagining people you don't know are gay, and having sex.

Oh yeah, I'm also not the one:

Imagining that Obama was born in Kenya, either.

You're totally over the top now, Telemundoh. Doesn't your jaw hurt from being gay too, right?

I look how I look, without plastic surgery, what am I supposed to do about it?

OK. That still doesn't answer my question.

Every "free" newsreader I checked out is crap IMO. There is no way I am going to

That just doesn't make sense to me.

Email programs don't work well for Usenet. They work fine for email.

Since you post from google many people will have you automatically kill

Already that way on a lot of stuff.. but of course there are workarounds.
Anything the system can design some nerd can get around. Remember when they thought they had a foolproof way to copy protect CD's? Remember when they forced Radio Shack to discontinue the WORM CD recorder? Then they keep thinking they have DVD's and Blu-Ray copy protected... it's an interesting war to watch..

The revolution will be decrypted!

leave it to the do-nothing republican't party to argue over a comedian's

Somebody gets it!

Palin baited the press for notoriety then didn't like what she got. By parading a barely 17 year old daughter, obviously pregnant, permitting the daughters fuck-buddy to live in their house, and talking about abstinence Sarah Palin got what she craved.

It has been forty five years since I did the Nam.My eight years older brother and I were over there the same year, 1964.His second Tour of Duty in Vietnam after a year in Germany.He was a Helicopter Mechanic at Vung Tau.I once caught the Chaplin Run one Sunday to go visit him.
I saw part of the Bob Hope show at Shannon Wright Compound, near Vinh Long.To me, it doesn't seem all that long ago.
How the years are flying by!

John Batchelor Show "Whole World Is Watching Tehran" Special

Cannot Hear the Boom

Trusted source Nick Grace, SourceWatch, identifies this video as a natural gas line on fire that leads to the explosion of a structure that is a Basij headquarters in Tehran. Looks to be dusk on Saturday June 20.

Report says that Basij were inside. No details on casualties. Early news from Tehran looks to more of the same random protests and chaos throughout the large boulevards and squares. I am updating for the next hours till show time.

American socialists spread fascism worldwide. Francis Bellamy (along with other American socialists, including Francis' famous cousin Edward Bellamy) spread fascist symbolism in the United States first, and then globally. http://rexcurry.net/fascism=socialism.html

The Bellamys wanted government to take over all schools. That is why a flag is over every school and in every classroom, accompanied by robotic chanting every morning for 12 years of every American child's life. http://rexcurry.net/pledge-allegiance-pledge-allegiance.jpg

That behavior influenced Girl Scouts, Boy Scouts and Cub Scouts (from 1907) and other Americans who spread the USA's "Nazi" salute worldwide, and the swastika, and robotic chanting to flags in military formation. http://rexcurry.net/pledge-of-allegiance-scouting.html

The early salute to the flag in the Pledge of Allegiance was the notorious stiff-arm salute. The salute (and the robotic chanting to the flag) began in 1892 with Francis when he was a self-proclaimed American socialist in the Nationalism movement. It was adopted later by the National Socialist German Workers Party. http://rexcurry.net/book1a1contents-pledge.html

The flag of the U.S. government is fasciate. The flag's 13 fasciae (bands or stripes) are red and white. The fasciated flag's authority and its early stiff-arm salute were reinforced by the U.S. government's use of the fasces symbol. The government still uses the fasces today.

The fasces [fas-eez] symbol shows a bundle of rods banded or fastened around an ax with the blade projecting. The words "fasten" and "band" are used because they are related to the word "Fascism." The fasces symbolized how everyone was bound to the authoritarianism of ancient Rome.

Here is another reason why the socialist role in Fascism is fascinating: "fascinating" means "spellbinding" (fastened or banded by a spell), making the words related to "fasces." The fascinating role of American socialists includes the Theosophical Society, Freemasons, swastika symbols and the spellbinding effect of socialist dogma for seducing groups and enslaving and killing millions of people worldwide.

In rural Italy to this day a woman who suspects her husband of infidelity will consult a strega, who will give her a fascino, a charm to stop him from straying.

Long ago, money was socialized in the U.S. (the Federal Reserve Act was imposed in 1913). The fasces is still commonly seen on some 25 cent coins. http://rexcurry.net/fascism=socialism2a.jpg In 1915, fasces appeared on an Indian head gold coin in the talons of an eagle. In 1916, fasces appeared on the Mercury dime.

It was much later that the symbol was adopted by Mussolini when he was a well-known socialist leader. http://rexcurry.net/mussolini.html

The fasces symbol appears in Congress http://rexcurry.net/fascism=socialism4a.jpg and is used in other government seals and symbols http://rexcurry.net/fascism=socialism3b.jpg

The fasces is on the seal of the Rome Academy where Francis Bellamy (1855-1932) attended school. http://rexcurry.net/fascist-flag.jpg Francis resided in Rome, New York. The Rome Free Academy exists today and its seal continues to display two fasces. Many cities in the state of New York have names from classical history (Troy, Ithaca, Syracuse, Utica, Rome) and that is why New York is the "Empire State," a reference to the Roman empire, and origin of the term "Empire State Building" for New York City's famous landmark.

The Pledge's right-arm salute was repeated in early movies containing fictional Roman scenes. Movies were new worldwide wonders that amazed and influenced everyone (including the socialist Mussolini in Italy and the leader of the National Socialist German Workers' Party). http://rexcurry.net/american-philological-association-apa.html

All of the above contributed to the Roman salute myth (the myth that the stiff-arm salute was an ancient Roman salute), debunked by the etymologist Dr. Rex Curry (author of "Pledge of Allegiance Secrets"). http://rexcurry.net/roman-salute-metropolitan-museum-of-art.html

The stiff-armed American salute spread through various groups including the Theosophical Society and Freemasons that supported or were supported by Edward Bellamy and Francis Bellamy.

In 1888, Edward Bellamy authored "Looking Backward" and it became an international bestseller, translated into every major language, including German and Italian.
Bellamy's book was known as the bible of National Socialism and it inspired Nationalism movements worldwide. The Bellamy's touted "military socialism." Madame Blavatsky, founder of the Theosophical Society, openly endorsed Bellamy's book. Her group worked with Bellamy's Nationalism movement.

http://rexcurry.net/theosophy-madame-blavatsky-theosophical-society.html

The swastika symbol was used by the Theosophical Society (from 1875) during the time when the Bellamys, Freemasons and the Theosophical Society worked together to promote socialism.
http://rexcurry.net/book1a1contents-swastika.html

American socialists bear some blame for altering the notorious symbol used as overlapping S-letters for "socialism" under the National Socialist German Workers Party. http://rexcurry.net/swastika3clear.jpg

As German socialism's notorious flag symbol, the swastika was deliberately turned 45 degrees to the horizontal and always oriented in the S-direction. Similar alphabetic symbolism is still visible as Volkswagen logos. http://rexcurry.net/swastika-audi-logo.JPG

Near the same period, the well-known and long-time socialist Benito Mussolini began to mimick American socialists in their use of the stiff-arm salute, robotic chanting to flags, the use of the fasces as a symbol of government, and the glorification of ancient Rome (or myths about Rome). In 1921, Mussolini (who acquired his title "il duce" -leader- when he was known only as a socialist, long before his new f-word for socialist faction) created a new sub-group called Fasci di combattimento. The term "fascio" was the Italian word for workers' groups, peasant organizations, labor unions and the other socialist groups where Mussolini had developed a large following. It meant "band," or people banding together, and referred to his socialist band of combat. It is similar to the word "faction" in that Mussolini's group was another of many socialist-inspired factions.

When Mussolini chose the ancient Roman fasces as a symbol of his socialist group, he was at the same time playing with the similarity of the words fascio and fasces, choosing an ancient symbol, and drawing a parallel between it and the socialists who had banded together, spellbound by Mussolini's leadership.

Another well-known socialist at that time was the leader of the National Socialist Workers Party in Germany (Hitler acquired the title "Furher" -leader- when he fascinated socialist groups, long before others applied new terms to his socialism). He had expanded the name of the party from "German Workers Party" at the same time that the swastika was adopted to represent S-letters banded together and symbolizing socialists banding together as the NSDAP.
http://rexcurry.net/swastika-hakenkreuz-oxford-english-dictionary.html

An American socialist group supported German socialists, and it was named the "German-American Bund" (German American Band or "Faction").

Mussolini's evolution of the fasces is similar to Hitler's evolution of an old symbol, the hakenkreuz (hooked cross) into modern alphabetic symbolism as "S" letters for "socialism," as shown in Dr. Curry's work. http://rexcurry.net/fascism-third-reich-hitler-nazism-swastika456.jpg

In late 1937, Mussolini continued to work with other socialists, including the National Socialist German Workers Party. Mussolini visited Germany in 1937 and pledged himself to support the National Socialist German Workers' Party. In 1939, the National Socialist German Workers' Party joined as allies with the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics to invade Poland in a pact to divide up Europe, spreading WWII.

During the second of the Dark Ages, socialism (a.k.a. Fascism) became fashionable, with fancy military uniforms, marching parades, and flag waving adoration. It led to modern inquisitions and the socialist Wholecaust (of which the Holocaust was a part): 60 million slaughtered under the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics; 50 million under the Peoples' Republic of China; 20 million under the National Socialist German Workers' Party. The worst inquisitions were the modern inquisitions (the socialist inquisitions), and they were the deadliest. Socialism/Fascism became unfashionable.

The Dark Age also refers to the period in Europe from the fall of Rome. The socialist Dark Age resulted from mimicking ancient Rome - and myths about Rome - as if to resurrect them.

American socialists had revived the fasces (and the swastika) and what it represented: fastening, binding and enslaving individuals to a centralized leviathan. Socialism fastens everyone to involuntary government programs and modern slavery. It binds everyone to bureaucracy.

America is still the worst example in the world of bizarre laws that lead robotic chanting to the fasciate federal flag in government schools (socialist schools) every day for 12 years of every child's life. It has changed generations of Americans from libertarians to authoritarians.

The ax in the fasces represents the constant threat of violence toward all who desire freedom.

It led to modern inquisitions and the socialist Wholecaust (of which the Holocaust was a part): 60 million slaughtered under the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics; 50 million under the Peoples' Republic of China; 20 million under the National Socialist German Workers' Party. The worst inquisitions were the modern inquisitions (the socialist inquisitions), and they were the deadliest. Socialism/Fascism became unfashionable.

The Dark Age also refers to the period in Europe from the fall of Rome. The socialist Dark Age resulted from mimicking ancient Rome - and myths about Rome - as if to resurrect them.

American socialists had revived the fasces (and the swastika) and what it represented: fastening, binding and enslaving individuals to a centralized leviathan. Socialism fastens everyone to involuntary government programs and modern slavery. It binds everyone to bureaucracy.

America is still the worst example in the world of bizarre laws that lead robotic chanting to the fasciate federal flag in government schools (socialist schools) every day for 12 years of every child's life. It has changed generations of Americans from libertarians to authoritarians.

The ax in the fasces represents the constant threat of violence toward all who desire freedom.

The author Jonah Goldberg cites Dr. Rex Curry in the book "Liberal Fascism: The Secret History of the American Left, From Mussolini to the Politics of Meaning" - "Religion was the glue that held this American national socialism together. Bellamy believed that his brand of socialist nationalism was the true application of Jesus' teachings. His cousin Francis Bellamy, the author of the Pledge of Allegiance, was similarly devoted. A founding member of the first Nationalist Club of Boston and co-founder of the Society of Christian Socialists, Francis wrote a Sermon, "Jesus, the Socialist," that electrified parishes acorss the country. In an expression of his "military socialism," the Pledge of Allegiance was accompanied by a [stiff-arm] salute to the flag in American public schools. Indeed, some contend that the Nazis got the idea for their salute from America. (page 216).

The story of the Pledge of Allegiance and its National Socialist roots is a fascinating one. Dr. Rex Curry, a passionate libertarian, has made the issue his white whale. See http://rexcurry.net/pledgesalute.html

Fascist Benito Mussolini and socialist Roosevelt held each other in high regard.
Roosevelt was a Big fan of Mussilini fascism because he recognized that fascism was the only means to true Socialism.

I would by far rather have the Private Sector run government than have
The Governement run the private sector.

So let me get this straight.... Since one asshole used the word fascism for its warlike unity of purpose connotations wen trying to organize some left wing moonbats we are supposed to utterly change the meaning of fascism and socialism so as to make them contemporary bedfellows. Is that about it?

Your attempt to call political parties and political movements, other then latter day Republicans, "fascist" is noted. The Republican Party of the United States of America is the most similar organization to fascism of any and all groups on this planet. Labor unions are not fascist and are fundamentally opposed to the central ideals of fascism. The call for unity is not the hallmark of fascism any more than the call for freedom and liberty are the hallmark of pseudo capitalism. The call for unity exists in every form or organized endeavor.

Here we go again: The effort to paint the Republican party is something other than fascist by associating socialism with fascism. The actual definition of fascism tells us that fascism is the antithesis of socialism. But the conservatives and the latter day Republicans are doing all they can to redefine the word:

http://www.fordham.edu/halsall/pgc.asp?page=mod/mussolini-fascism.html --
..Fascism [is] the complete opposite of…Marxian Socialism, the materialist conception of history of human civilization can be explained simply through the conflict of interests among the various social groups and by the change and development in the means and instruments of production.... Fascism, now and always, believes in holiness and in heroism; that is to say, in actions influenced by no economic motive, direct or indirect.

The above link and the excerpt are from an encyclopedia entry created by none other then Benito Mussolini in which he describes "fascism".

War is pure fascist socialism. The nationalists subsidize the defense industry with no-bid contracts, while fomenting conflict abroad. A revolving door is installed between the military and the defense industry and retired generals become lobbyists, consultants, and BOD directors.

But this kind of corporate welfare and inbreeding permeates our entire social structure. Laws are written to ensure a growing need for prison beds, now a largely for-profit enterprise. This is why pot will never be legal; potheads meake great prisoners. They are non-violent and good workers.

Our society is totally fucked-up. I do hope it collapses completely, so we can have a fresh start. Too bad we just can't identify more with the Nazis; their lesson is a good one.

You seem to have answered your own question: Mussolini was a fascist.

Your ridiculous unsupported claims that Roosevelt was a "socialist" and that "he recognized that fascism was the only means to true Socialism" are your own demented creations.

The reality is that socialism is a political manifestation in which the government _OWNS_ the means of production. Fascism is ab-use of government by the wealthy and powerful in league with the church to maintain and enhance the power of the owner class. These two political contrivances are entirely different.

Newspapers, journals and periodicals were all well-established media forms by the 1930s but the decade was a time of technological change when both the radio and the newsreels became forms of mass communication to stand alongside, complement and often rival the newspapers. China’s first wireless station – the Osborn Radio Station, known alternatively as XRO and the Radio Corporation of China – had opened in 1923 in Shanghai. It transmitted from studios on the roof of the Dollar Building on the Bund with an initial 65-minute programme of classical and light music as well as some news. The station estimated that there were 500 wireless sets in the International Settlement though, to boost the audience, XRO’s signal was transmitted to Tianjin and other major areas where foreigners lived. The station was owned and established by an American journalist called E. G. Osborn and a wealthy overseas Chinese. Sun Yat-sen declared himself a fan of the new media but there simply weren’t enough listeners. Despite moving the studios to the more prestigious roof garden of the Wing On Department Store on Nanking Road and trying to organise live concerts, the station failed after a few months due to a combination of precious few listeners, government distrust and censorship.

Consumers have shown NO INTEREST in HD They don't even know what it is! So why would they want a power increase? duh... Let's call be honest and call it what it is. A real estate grab for broadcasters..
FM receivers in cell phones, this won't work either...

About twenty minutes ago, a car pulled up in my driveway.A dude steps out and he knocks on my door.At first, I couldn't understand a word he said.I said, What? He said, Are you the Mexican (Wetback) who does swimming pools? I told him, It isn't me, nothing Mexican (Wetback) about me!

There are only two short streets and one other street about a block long in my neighborhood.No Wetbacks live around here as far as I know.

I don't know the first thing about doing swimming pools,,, whatever that is? There are no swimming pools around here.Except for that plastic kiddy play pool in that front yard next door to me.

A lotta guys dont get it. When you look into matriarchy and the faith in the Great Earth Mother, aka Gaia, Potnia, Hera, Juno, Venus, Dianna, Astarte, Sophia, Aphrodite, Freya, Brigit... and many more, you find out there are so many names cause nobody went to war over what the name should be.

They didnt have jackasses trying to define terms for everyone else; it was a system built on consensus. And we see them in the postings all the time, with their own definitions of terms so they can have strawmen.

Its one of the problems going on in Iran right now. Any top down system, be it fascism, socialism, capitalism, communism, or whatever is in trouble because the party line can no longer be sold without being taken apart in venues like this line by line, to see what it says, and what it fails to say.

FAUX is free.

Commiecast also blocks about 5 minutes an hour of CNN

Wells wasn't an "asshole", but a very intelligent man. But, yes, that's about it. He was interested in the tactical use of force to bring about his ideals, but that's as far as it went. He was repelled by the actual fascist ideology. Goldberg has found this rather arcane and forgotton episode from the 1930s and re-fashioned it for his own purposes.

To bad you are so brainwashed, cuz you have some interesting ideas. But you'll never find truth.
It's pure fascisism, nothing socialistic about it. But that concept is taboo in America.
Judging from your lingo, you've been brainwashed by the RW libertarians, probably the LP Libertarians.
What a waste.

Wanna test that concept?
Most people would not, they shift into self defense mode at the very idea, and close down.

In our specific context; Here's how they do it:
They have re-defined "socialism" in your mind. Try a dictionary.
Here's 20 of them: www.onelook.com/

Caution: they are similar enough to your implanted

Justice to all Mankind, Even Those Who Make an Enemy of Islam
I hope you don't mind receiving my letter. It is short but full of information.

Justice to all Mankind, Even Those Who Make an Enemy of Islam

The saying of Allaah the Exalted:

"O you who believe! Stand out firmly for Allaah as just witnesses; and let not the enmity and hatred of others allow you to avoid justice. Be just: that is closer to piety; and fear Allaah. Indeed, Allaah is Well-Acquainted with what you do."
[Soorah Al-Maa'idah 5:8]

Ibn Katheer explains:
"Do not let your hatred of a people cause you to be unjust to them, rather you must be just to everyone, friends or enemies, this is why Allaah said: 'Be just: that is closer to piety' Meaning being just is closer to piety than being unjust."
At Tabari, a renowned scholar of the 8th century comments:
"Do not let enmity between you and others cause you to be unjust in your dealings and rulings with them such that you oppress them due to the enmity that is between you… It has been stated that this verse was revealed when the Jews plotted to murder the Prophet."

Al Qurtubi, a scholar from the 12th century states:
"This verse also proves that the disbelief of non-Muslims must not prevent us from being just to them…and it is not permissible for us to retaliate in the same manner, even if they kill our women and children and cause sorrow to befall us, it is not permissible for us to act likewise with the intention of making them feel grief and sorrow."

Allaah the Elevated says:
"Verily, Allaah enjoins justice, beneficence, giving (help) to kith and kin, and forbids all forms of evil and Al-Munkar (i.e. all that is prohibited by Islamic law and oppression). He admonishes you, that you may take heed.)."
[Soorah An-Nahl 16:90]

Ibn Katheer states:
"Allaah orders his servants with justice, which is fairness and equity, and encourages them to be beneficent."

Allaah the Mighty says:
"Indeed We have sent Our Messengers with clear proofs, and revealed with them the Scripture and the Balance (justice) that mankind may keep up justice."

[Soorah Al-Hadeed 57:25]

At Tabari comments:
“Meaning: So that people may interact amongst each other with justice.”

Allaah the Merciful says:
"That no burdened person (with sins) shall bear the burden (sins) of another."
[Soorah An-Najm 53:38]

Ibn Katheer comments:
“Meaning: Anybody who has oppressed himself by disbelief or sins will be responsible for those sins, nobody else will carry the burden.”

As Sa`di, a scholar of the 19th century explains:
“…and no one shall bear the sin of another.”

The noble scholar; `Abdul-Azeez Aal Ash-Shaykh, current Mufti of the kingdom of Saudi Arabia comments:
“Allaah judged that no person shall bear the burden of another person’s sin due to His absolute justness.”

The Messenger of Allaah, may peace be upon him, informed us that Allaah said:
“O My Servants, indeed I have prohibited injustice for myself, and I have prohibited it amongst you.”

The noble scholar; `Abdul-`Azeez Aal Ash-Shaykh comments:
“This is general to all mankind, whether they are Muslim or not, it is not permissible for any one person to oppress another even if they were enemies or harbored hatred for one another. Enmity and hatred do not authorize anyone in the legislation of Islam to be unjust or practice oppression.”

The former Mufti of Saudi Arabia, Shaykh `Abdul-`Azeez Ibn Baaz states:
“It is not permissible for Muslims to transgress upon non-Muslims, not in their person, their wealth or their reputations if they are formal residents in a Muslim country, have a treaty with Muslims or are under Muslim protection, rather they must be given their rights. Muslims must not transgress upon non-Muslims by stealing from, betraying or cheating them with regards to their wealth. Likewise they mustn’t physically transgress upon them by hitting them and so on. The fact that they are residents, under treaty or protection secures them from that.”

The noble scholar; Saalih al Luhaydan, chairman of the higher judiciary council of Saudi Arabia states:
“During battles, the Messenger of Allaah would advice the army:

“Do not kill women, children, the elderly and those devoted to worship in their religious centers.”

This means that Islam does not permit killing anyone except those who kill, wage war or oppress Muslims."

An Nawawi, a distinguished scholar from the 12th century states: "There is a consensus amongst the scholars that killing women and children is prohibited in battle except if they themselves engage in battle."

Could be. But that's off topic.
That is a false, manufactured dichotomy.

That sounds like an oxymoron. Like wanting a big military, but a small

They're still pushing Goldbergs imbecilic claim that Mussolini's "Ultimate merging of state and corporate power" is liberal. Well, somebody forgot to tell the Republicans, because that was the meaning of life for them for the last eight years. Letting corporations run an extremely militaristic government while letting them set policy, carry out wars-for-profit, letting them write their own legislation and then letting them sponge off the taxpayers after they looted the country is not even distantly related to that capitalism hating liberalism we're always hearing about and being accused of fostering. It should also be noted that the same people pushing this line of BS are simultaneously calling Obama a Marxist. This isn't even worth arguing about. It's just another piece of right wing driftwood, like "The Holocaust museum shooter was a liberal" or "Obama is a secret Muslim."

The Radical Homosexual Agenda held its third Parade w/Out a Permit on the evening of June 19th to celebrate the 40th anniversary of the Stonewall Rebellion. This was the third Parade Without A Permit which started in 2007 when the New York City Police, with help of the City Council Speaker Christine Quinn created an arbitrary rule that stated that if more than 50 people gathered without a permit, they would be subject to arrest.

The Radical Homosexual Agenda held its third Parade w/Out a Permit on the evening of June 19th to celebrate the 40th anniversary of the Stonewall Rebellion. This was the third Parade Without A Permit which started in 2007 when the New York City Police, with help of the City Council Speaker Christine Quinn created an arbitrary rule that stated that if more than 50 people gathered without a permit, they would be subject to arrest.

We’ve challenged that rule while our openly gay city Council Speaker Quinn continues to side with the NYPD while anointing herself as the leader of the gay community.

With not a drop of rain and in high spirits, we began our march at Washington Square Park. Queers, allies and residents of the park took to the streets and marched to the Stonewall Inn to the applause of people on the sidewalks as we chanted “We will not be quiet! Stonewall was a riot!”

From the Stonewall Inn we continued our march down Christopher Street where onlookers stepped off of the sidewalks and into the streets to join our party. One onlooker stepped to the front of the banner and unleashed his inner baton twirler as the RHA drum core pounded out a rhythm and lead us in the chant, “This street is for faggots. F-A-G-G-O-T-S!”

The NYPD made their presence felt as they trailed behind us in squad cars. We continued down Christopher Street as we marched past an NYPD mobile command unit set up on the street. We marched past a commandeered city bus waiting to be used as a temporary arrest station and a generator with flood lights set up at an intersection to intimidate and harass the queer youth of color who come to the village.

We chanted: “We’re here! We’re queer! We’re fabulous! Don’t fuck with us!” as we crossed the West Side Highway and reached the end of our march at the Christopher Street Piers. But our trip down Christopher Street reminded us of how far we really haven’t traveled from 1969 to 2009.

It’s still 1969 when queers can’t assemble in peace without being harassed and arrested. It’s still 1969 when NYC queer clubs and bars are raided by the NYPD or fined out of their existence. It’s still 1969 when queers are arrested in police sting operations in sex shops, parks and private homes; and it’s still 1969 when lesbians are beaten by the NYPD.

It’s still 1969 and we have to ask today where is our rage and were the fuck is our rebellion?

Democrats soaked in blood of slavery Exclusive: Roger Hedgecock exposes roots of historic wrongs against blacks Posted: June 21, 2009
6:37 pm Eastern

By Roger Hedgecock

Editor's note: Roger Hedgecock's show streams live on WND from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m. Eastern and then again in the following three hours on tape.

The U.S. Senate voted unanimously last week to adopt a resolution apologizing for slavery.

Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, lead sponsor of the resolution, said, "You wonder why we didn't do it 100 years ago. It is important to have a collective response to a collective injustice."

Only after decades of public education ignoring and distorting U.S. history can such a huge lie be said with a straight face.

Senator, you didn't do it 100 years ago because 100 years ago you Democrats were enforcing Jim Crow segregation laws, poll taxes to keep blacks from voting, and riding around in sheets and pointy hats just in case blacks didn't get the message.

You say "It's important to have a collective response" because you want to bury the origins, purposes, and historical practices of your own party.

The worst part is, Republicans in the Senate let you get away with it.

Principled Republicans knowing their history would have authored a resolution reciting the facts that the Republican Party was formed, among other reasons, to oppose slavery and that the Republican Party and its first President Abraham Lincoln responded to Southern, Democrat-led secession with a successful war that preserved the union and freed the slaves.

After Lincoln's assassination (by a Democrat), the Republican-led Congress (over the objections of the Democratic Party minority) amended the Constitution to confirm the liberation of the slaves (13th Amendment: slavery abolished), and the 14th Amendment (freed slaves are citizens equal to all citizens) and the 15th Amendment (right to vote guaranteed to freed slaves).

Southern Democrats spent the next 100 years trying to keep freed slaves down with segregation laws, poll taxes to deny the right to vote, and lynching to enforce the social order. The KKK was formed by a Democrat; no Republican has ever been a member of the KKK. This is the heritage of the Democratic Party.

In fact, the Democratic Party was formed in the first place to defend and expand slavery.

In 1840, the very first national nominating convention of the Democratic Party adopted a platform which read in part:

Resolved, That Congress has no power ... to interfere with or control the domestic institutions of the several states ... that all efforts by abolitionists ... made to induce Congress to interfere with questions of slavery ... are calculated ... to diminish the happiness of the people, and endanger the stability and permanency of the union.

Got that, Sen. Harkin? Your party was born defending slavery as necessary for the happiness of the people and threatening secession and war if slavery were challenged.

The same party platform language was used in 1844, 1848, 1852 and 1856. In 1860, the Democrat commitment to slavery took a harsher tone.

The Fugitive Slave Law was passed by Congress in 1850. This monstrous law provided that, since slaves were the personal property of their masters, runaway slaves must be returned to their owners. The law required all law enforcement officers to assist in the recapture of runaway slaves or risk a fine of $1,000 (about $100,000 in today's dollars)!

The Republican Party was formed in the 1850s in part as a political reaction to this unjust law.

In their national convention of 1860, Democrats harshly responded to certain Northern (Republican) states that were passing state laws to evade the Fugitive Slave Law by adopting a plank in the Democratic Party Platform which read:

Resolved, That the enactments of the State Legislatures to defeat the faithful execution of the Fugitive Slave Law, are hostile in character, subversive of the Constitution, and revolutionary in their effect.

Senator, your Democratic Party has much to be apologetic about on the slavery issue.

During the civil war, the Southern Democrats led the Confederacy out of the Union; Northern Democrats formed a separate party which opposed the war. The 1864 (Northern) Democratic Party platform adopted a "peace" plank which read in part:

... after four years of failure to restore the union by the experiment of war ... justice, humanity, liberty, and the public welfare demand ... a cessation of hostilities ... to the end that ... peace may be restored ...

Here is the origin of today's Democratic Party "Peace at any Price, Better Red than Dead, Why Can't we all just get Along" foreign policy.

The war was started by Democrat secessionists, and just as President Lincoln was on the verge of victory, the Northern Democrats wanted to save the South and slavery with "peace talks"! Voters knew better in 1864 and re-elected Lincoln.

But the Democrats weren't through. In 1868, Sen. Harkin's party condemned the Republican Party in its party platform as the "Radical Party," and condemned Reconstruction in these unforgettable words:

Instead of restoring the Union, it (the Radical Party) has dissolved it, and subjected ten states (the former Confederate states) ... to military despotism and negro supremacy.

And, senator, don't tell me this is all ancient history in a lame attempt to evade the true origins of your party.

As recently as 1964, when the Senate debated the Civil Rights Act, Southern Democrats (including Al Gore's father) voted no. While Northern Democrats voted yes, their votes were not enough. The deciding votes to pass this landmark bill were provided by Sen. Everett Dirksen, R-Ill., and the Republicans.

Republicans should be proud of their heritage of liberation of the slaves and civil rights voting record.

It's Harkin and the Democrats who should apologize and pay reparations.

I have one of each and both are very good value. However the first E1 I purchased had the display problem, the second ... they snuck in a demo into the box, finally the third is up and running and quite the radio.
Shame they had those rough spots along the way.

Get a broom.Hold the broom horizontally with one hand near the end of the broom handle and with your other hand push the broom back and forth in an arc.You can swing an arc about six feet wide, I think.Now, imagine that broom is a piece of rigid PVC pipe and you have one of those cheapo made in China 12 electric fans fastened to one end of the pipe.Drill a small hole near the end of the fan blade and put a plastic tie in each hole.Hook up the battery from your vehicle to the fan with some long wire.Try that out on your yard/grass/weeds.If it works ok, let me know and I will rig up my own ''lawn mower''. If you see any moles, beat the hell out of them with the pipe.

Eton E1XM receiver with serial in the 80xxx (not one of the first-run from the manufacturer). It has worked wonderfully until, recently, the buttons stopped working. All of them. The display is perfect, it still gets signal and produces audio (though without button operation, it's in the SW band only) and everything else operates just fine. Called R.L. Drake about repair, they estimate 1 hour of labor plus parts (estimate $125, and shipping both ways to Ohio). I've decided to bail. Your options: buy from me for $100 plus actual shipping and insurance, and get it repaired, in which case you've got a $450 radio (calculation: $418 from Universal Radio plus tax and shipping) for about $250. Or, you could cannibalize it for parts. Power supply and satellite antenna included. One last note on condition: The radio's folding antenna is slightly bent at the top section.

"May and June appear to disappoint."

"How’s Business? Despite hints of recovery in some corners, the overall recession weighed heavy on radio revenues in May – and the picture doesn’t look much better for the current month. Analyst Jim Boyle has been collecting revenue data for Inside Radio and finds May was down 26%."

Unfortunately appdb.winehq.org says HRD 4.0 connects, locks up and has to be killed. I cant find any listing of HRD on frankscorner.org but it did lead me to www.codeweavers.com which says it's "Known not to Open this link and then select/copy the whole page contents.

Paste it into a word processor and then save it as a text file.

After it's saved, right click on the icon, get 'properties' and make it an 'executable' file by checking off the little box in the properties listing.

Open a terminal, go to the directory you've saved the file in and type in the name of this now executable file. Do this as a normal user, NOT sudo or su or root.

Don't forget to put a ./ in front of the name.

A whole bunch of Microsoft stuff will now be downloaded into your .wine folder. There have to be some responses during the download, so you can't leave the room in shame.

It isn't something I'm proud of and it's certainly something I would never tell the children.

Please let us know how it goes.

I have two of the "Twin Coil Ferrite AM Antennas" . They do work well. One
I use on the CC Radio Plus(needs some help).
'Just that I thought there might have been a ferrite I could slip inside to make the set more portable.
I haven't even tried the XM feature yet. Seems awful expensive for something I get for free. 'Guess I'm just cheap.
The E1 is one of my best ones along with the Sony SW-55, just wish they had made the display on the E1 a little brighter.

This particular obituary touches briefly on Ed's service record.

Here is some more info from another:

During World War II, he was a Marine aviator, flight instructor and test pilot. Discharged in 1946, returning to active duty in the Korean War in 1953.

He remained in the Marine Corps Reserve, retiring with the rank of Colonel in 1966 and was then commissioned as a Brigadier General in the California Air National Guard.

Scientology's irrational dislike of psychiatry is very old news.

They use various front organizations, such as the Citizens' Commission on Human Rights (CCHR) to advance their position. On occasion, non-Scientologist "experts" get involved.

In the case of the anti-psychiatry campaign, Thomas Szasz is a key figure.

Szasz has close ties to the Competitive Enterprise Institute (CEI).

The CEI is nothing but an extension of the oil and tobacco industries. Firms such as ExxonMobil have been known to pay six figure retainers to CEI "experts" such as John Berlau, Myron Ebell, and Marlo Lewis despite the fact that their expertise, such as it is, is in "spin" as opposed to science.

Andrew Langer was with CEI; he left to join the National Federation of Independent Businesses (NFIB) and he now heads the Institute for Liberty (IFL).

Langer is a committed member of CEI's camp. He has defended Berlau against attacks on his pseudoscientific beliefs (e.g., that heating a gas makes it heavier). Langer is also an outspoken opponent of free speech.

Brooke Oberwetter is another "refugee" from CEI. Her current project, DC Signal, claims to be a telecommunications policy consultancy. It is not clear what that means; it is, however, clear that they play a role in the propaganda attacks mounted by the opponents of psychiatry.

Berlau, despite his odd ideas, does not seem to lack supporters. Another is Jacob Sullum, with Reason Magazine. Sullum, of course, is known to be a paid consultant to the tobacco industry, so this is not surprising. Sullum is also a devotee of Szasz, and has defended Szasz' controversial positions.

Another contingent has an irrational hatred of those who seek to treat adopted children with psychiatric problems.

Jean Mercer holds a Ph.D. in psychology, but she has never held a professional license, that means she's never treated a patient. She has a blog sponsored by Psychology Today, but when people posted comments on her blog asking about her background, she disabled the comment feature. This is censorship, so typical of Scientology and the "statist" ideology espoused by the likes of Berlau, Ebell, Lewis, Langer, and Oberwetter.

Larry Sarner describes himself as an inventor. It is documented that he at least attempted to invent a voting machine. It is also documented that his machines did not work, resulting in significant losses to the investors, a financial scandal, and bankruptcy litigation. Sarner now spends his time promulgating quack theories on mathematics and science and running a propaganda campaign against qualified medical professionals.

Sarner's wife, Linda Rosa, should know better. She is a nurse. Nonetheless, instead of helping people, she has joined Sarner in his hate campaign.

A frequent collaborator of Mercer, Sarner, and Rosa is Monica Pignotti. Pignotti was a Scientologist. Pignotti, after leaving Scientology, was also a practitioner of the bizarre disciplines of Thought Field Therapy and Voice Technology. Pignotti spends a great deal of time running her own hate and propaganda campaigns.

A disturbing theme uniting the campaigns of Sarner, Rosa, Mercer, and Pignotti is the torture of children. Some style them "advocates for child torture" (ACT) which seems quite accurate!

Finally, we have Charly D. Miller. Miller claims to be a retired paramedic. Miller has plans, yet unrealized, to write travel guides for the locations in the Harry Potter books.

Miller runs a website, with "opinion papers" that are often cited by Sarner and Rosa; these papers have been described as "incisive" but that must be a minority opinion!

Miller's site changes frequently. No, not because she adds new content, but because she tends to post copyrighted material. She will not respond to polite requests for its removal, so copyright owners have had to resort to legal means to force her to do so.

Thanks again for the help, Bob. I'm going to keep trying to sell it.
(I went to storage and opened up my near-mint Grundig Satellit 700, so I haven't gone without my SW program favorites).

Wondering whether $100 isn't the right price for this receiver. I'll take best offer above $70 for E1XM with power supply and satellite antenna (plus actual shipping). Anyone out there? I can say the E1XM is exceptionally easy to work on.

cheers

How much to ship that E1 to 96271 via USPS Priority mail? I'll offer the $70 for it. Of course, I'll have to turn it right around to Drake for the repairs (I'm a pretty darn good tech, but SMT is way beyond my skillset (my eyes are not so good as they used to be).

That gives me a very long list of packages it can install. I suppose I could use the nuclear option of 'make it work', install every version of every runtime and/or library that it may need.

But I kinda doubt that HRD needs 5 different versions of visual basic runtime, 6 versions of visual c runtime, let alone flash, firefox and divx!

Do you know which ones HRD needs?

Thanks,
Nigel

Hey Brenda Ann: USPS now has flat-rate Priority Mail. Looks like it would fit in their Large Flat Rate Box with bubble wrap and styro peanuts. $13.50. Insurance: $2.75. Contact me mjcrook (at) gmail.com.
I'll be happy to provide a photo. (I'm in ZIP 33801)

cheers

That's a good bet for you. Telemundoh doesn't have any originality to him. To have an original thought he would need to have a brain. Hell, even half-a-brain would do.

I had no clue which one was being used, so I installed all of them. I should have started up the radio program with 'strace' to see the system calls.

Mind you, I don't know if 'strace' works with wine or not.

If I get really energetic one day, I could start appending the letters 'OLD' to end of the oldest runtime files, one at a time, to see when HRD quits working.

That amount of work scares me.

Perhaps we could start a write in campaign to get HRD ported to a native Linux application.

You really need to keep your fantasies to yourself. They really aren't very healthy. Come one, Telemundoh, just because you like to frequent Buggery King doesn't mean that you should broadcast such things to others.

Lol! I stand corrected. Telemundoh would have to go for maximum control (but with minimal results).

Hey retard, show us where I "posted the F- bomb".

Have another hard day saying "would you like fries with that."

Nice job bombing the news group with 21 posts none of which were worth reading.

He's snapping at everything. I bet his neighbors have some funny stories to tell, kind of like when I lived down the road from a guy who would go on a bender 3 or 4 times a year, and smash his house up, or his car, or threaten the wrong guy, etc. Last time I saw him, he was sitting at the curb, blubbering after getting his nose broken by another neighbor who took offense to his making racial slurs to his "wife", who wasn't his wife, just someone they had hired as a nanny to take care of their older kids, since his actual wife had major complications from pregnancy. That was the second time I saw him with a broken nose. The first time, he had fallen down in the street after trashing his wife's car.

I wonder if Telly drinks?

Tsk tsk. You're gonna get him all riled again. He's been quiet for a few days, no doubt doing further research into the Obama BC "crisis".

He still seems to have a good knowledge of radio and electronics, but something seems to have gone seriously wrong. I can't understand how anyone could possibly be friends with, or have a family member spouting Obama BC insanity without telling them they need help desperately, and trying to convince them to get themselves some help. Apparently, Telemundoh is just raving at will and nobody is stepping up and telling him how messed up his thinking is.

My ex the (child) shrink thinks Telemundoh is just "fascinating". Even she laughs at his angry outbursts, even while trying to figure out what drives the poor kooktard's delusions. The whole thing about kooktards calling people gay all the time just cracks her up.

Telemundoh listen to Eddie? That would amaze me. He probably has all kinds of problems with the language he uses, or just because he's black.

I wonder if people think Telemundoh is dead too, like a lot of people

"iBiquity Forced to Build Own Portable Player"

"Sure, Microsoft's very modestly selling, very decent Zune players will feature HD Radio in a new model later this year, but iBiquity is making its own portable, too. That makes nearly no sense if the firm could find any other company willing to incorporate the long-awaiting portable digital AM/FM chips... The only reason a company gets into the business of making its own branded stuff is that they can't find a partner... Struble does some excellent tap dancing in this interview, where the reporter doesn't have the history to cite his previous statements over the last several years, some of which were repeated here."

Prepared jointly by the U.S. Dept. of Commerce, NOAA, Space Weather Prediction Center and the U.S. Air Force.
Updated 2009 Jun 24 2201 UTC

Joint USAF/NOAA Report of Solar and Geophysical Activity
SDF Number 175 Issued at 2200Z on 24 Jun 2009

IA. Analysis of Solar Active Regions and Activity from 23/2100Z to 24/2100Z: Solar activity was very low. No flares occurred during the past 24 hours. Region 1023 (S23E01) continues to be the only spotted region on the disk and was stable and quiet.

IB. Solar Activity Forecast: Solar activity is expected to be very low.

IIA. Geophysical Activity Summary 23/2100Z to 24/2100Z:
The geomagnetic field ranged from quiet to active levels during the past 24 hours. In particular, active periods were observed between 0300-0900Z and 1800-2100Z. Solar wind signatures showed a change to slightly disturbed conditions beginning around 0300Z and lasting through the period: the magnetic field intensity increased, the Bz component of the solar wind showed occasional moderate fluctuations with peak negative values around -10 nT early in the day, and around -20 nT later in the day. In addition the spiral angle phi indicated two possible sector boundary changes. During the last 12 hours of the period solar wind velocity was gradually increasing. The signatures late in the day were consistent with the onset of a coronal hole high speed stream.

IIB. Geophysical Activity Forecast: The geomagnetic field is expected to be generally unsettled with a chance for active periods for the first day (25 June) as the current disturbance continues.
Activity levels are expected to decline to generally quiet levels for the second and third days (26-27 June).

III. Event Probabilities 25 Jun-27 Jun
Class M 01/01/01
Class X 01/01/01
Proton 01/01/01
PCAF green

IV. Penticton 10.7 cm Flux

You could argue that electronics is a "conservative" club, because it is about chips, and chips are made by companies, and companies are on Wall Street.

I had links to 2 Radio-Electronics projects on building a very nice small

Can be just an "active magnetic loop" design as the Wellbrook is. Doesn't necessarily have to be tunable.
I know what it's like to misplace things. I had a plan for a Wellbrook 1530 clone including the balanced broadband rf amp/control box but it's nowhere to be found. Probably ended up in the shredder.
About 40 feet back from the house I'm running into all kinds of interference from Bell and Cable wires running at right angles across the back. I'll have to mount the unit somewhere between 20 and 35 feet away from the house for the best quiet spot. Then with the new rotor I purchased for the project, I can hopefully null out most of the rest of the interfering garbage. The MFJ-1026 should remove near all of what's left. 'Got everything ready for the build except the main part.

Superstar sibling Michael Jackson, who has given money to his brothers in the past, seems to have turned his back on them. He never made good on his promise to take them back on tour after his 2004 child molestation trial ended.

The last time they shared a stage, he paid them each just $1,100 dollars, according to the Post, for performing at his 2001 star-studded concert where he celebrated 30 years in the music business. In contrast, he reportedly paid Marlon Brando $1 million just to appear.

At 0345 UTC on June 26, signals from Oceania seem to be doing very well. RNZI on 15720 is very strong with Pacific instrumental music and Australia is also doing very well on 15515 with a tourism-related interview between two women. SIO-: I'll call it 454+, but all ten lights of the 2010 were lit, excellent signals despite local thunderstorm. Heard with both a Sony ICF-2010 and Sangean ATS-803A, using an old Radio Shack Amplified SW Antenna fed by 15' of external wire. (Bryant-KY)

Propagation conditions from Australia and NZ have been generally very good since the beginning of the month. Before that it was mostly poor.

Usually propagation conditions improve around the month of March to that region but this year it was not until June that a big improvement occurred.

I have a 86cm tuned loop, that is better than the ALA1530 on an Akai tuner, cause it mixes up radios stations with the ala..

http://users.fulladsl.be/spb13810/

a wire of 15m will do for the 1500khz, but for 540Khz, you might need up to 20meter.

I have used hula-hoops, and think that is the most efficient loop, ...

Some Basic Islamic Beliefs
Please forgive me for any disturbance, but I have an important subject to address to you regarding FAITH, and I Don't intend to overload your email with unnecessary messages…

Some Basic Islamic Beliefs
1) Belief in God:
Muslims believe in one, unique, incomparable God, Who has no son nor partner, and that none has the right to be worshipped but Him alone. He is the true God, and every other deity is false. He has the most magnificent names and sublime perfect attributes. No one shares His divinity, nor His attributes. In the Quran, God describes Himself:

Say, "He is God, the One. God, to Whom the creatures turn for their needs. He begets not, nor was He begotten, and there is none like Him." (Quran, 112:1-4)

Chapter 112 of the Quran written in Arabic calligraphy.

No one has the right to be invoked, supplicated, prayed to, or shown any act of worship, but God alone.

God alone is the Almighty, the Creator, the Sovereign, and the Sustainer of everything in the whole universe. He manages all affairs. He stands in need of none of His creatures, and all His creatures depend on Him for all that they need. He is the All-Hearing, the All-Seeing, and the All-Knowing. In a perfect manner, His knowledge encompasses all things, the open and the secret, and the public and the private. He knows what has happened, what will happen, and how it will happen. No affair occurs in the whole world except by His will. Whatever He wills is, and whatever He does not will is not and will never be. His will is above the will of all the creatures. He has power over all things, and He is able to do everything. He is the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful, and the Most Beneficent. In one of the sayings of the Prophet Muhammad , we are told that God is more merciful to His creatures than a mother to her child.1 God is far removed from injustice and tyranny. He is All-Wise in all of His actions and decrees. If someone wants something from God, he or she can ask God directly without asking anyone else to intercede with God for him or her.

God is not Jesus, and Jesus is not God.2 Even Jesus himself rejected this. God has said in the Quran:

Indeed, they have disbelieved who have said, "God is the Messiah (Jesus), son of Mary." The Messiah said, "Children of Israel, worship God, my Lord and your Lord. Whoever associates partners in worship with God, then God has forbidden Paradise for him, and his home is the Fire (Hell). For the wrongdoers,3 there will be no helpers." (Quran, 5:72)

God is not a trinity. God has said in the Quran:

Indeed, they disbelieve who say, "God is the third of three (in a trinity)," when there is no god but one God. If they desist not from what they say, truly, a painful punishment will befall the disbelievers among them. Would they not rather repent to God and ask His forgiveness? For God is Oft-Forgiving, Most Merciful. The Messiah (Jesus), son of Mary, was no more than a messenger… (Quran, 5:73-75)

Islam rejects that God rested on the seventh day of the creation, that He wrestled with one of His angels, that He is an envious plotter against mankind, or that He is incarnate in any human being. Islam also rejects the attribution of any human form to God. All of these are considered blasphemous. God is the Exalted. He is far removed from every imperfection. He never becomes weary. He does not become drowsy nor does he sleep.

The Arabic word Allah means God (the one and only true God who created the whole universe). This word Allah is a name for God, which is used by Arabic speakers, both Arab Muslims and Arab Christians. This word cannot be used to designate anything other than the one true God. The Arabic word Allah occurs in the Quran about 2700 times. In Aramaic, a language related closely to Arabic and the language that Jesus habitually spoke,4 God is also referred to as Allah.

2) Belief in the Angels:
Muslims believe in the existence of the angels and that they are honored creatures. The angels worship God alone, obey Him, and act only by His command. Among the angels is Gabriel, who brought down the Quran to Muhammad .

3) Belief in God's Revealed Books:
Muslims believe that God revealed books to His messengers as proof for mankind and as guidance for them. Among these books is the Quran, which God revealed to the Prophet Muhammad . God has guaranteed the Quran's protection from any corruption or distortion. God has said:

Indeed, We have sent down the Quran, and surely We will guard it (from corruption). (Quran, 15:9)

4) Belief in the Prophets and Messengers of God:
Muslims believe in the prophets and messengers of God, starting with Adam, including Noah, Abraham, Ishmael, Isaac, Jacob, Moses, and Jesus (peace be upon them). But God's final message to man, a reconfirmation of the eternal message, was revealed to the Prophet Muhammad . Muslims believe that Muhammad is the last prophet sent by God, as God has said:

Muhammad is not the father of any one of your men, but he is the Messenger of God and the last of the prophets… (Quran, 33:40)

Muslims believe that all the prophets and messengers were created human beings who had none of the divine qualities of God.

5) Belief in the Day of Judgment:
Muslims believe in the Day of Judgment (the Day of Resurrection) when all people will be resurrected for God's judgment according to their beliefs and deeds.

6) Belief in Al-Qadar:
Muslims believe in Al-Qadar, which is Divine Predestination, but this belief in Divine Predestination does not mean that human beings do not have freewill. Rather, Muslims believe that God has given human beings freewill. This means that they can choose right or wrong and that they are responsible for their choices.

The belief in Divine Predestination includes belief in four things: 1) God knows everything. He knows what has happened and what will happen. 2) God has recorded all that has happened and all that will happen. 3) Whatever God wills to happen happens, and whatever He wills not to happen does not happen. 4) God is the Creator of everything

Hello Justtis,

When you want to make a tunable loop (so tuning at the loop, or very close to it), you don't need an amplifier in most cases.

Tuning (with reasonable match) has the advantage of large signal output for relative small loops and rejection of strong out of band signals. Also it is easier to get a good balance to avoid conducted interference traveling via the coaxial feeder to the loop antenna.

Disadvantage is that you have to tune when changing band or frequency and the tuning unit is outdoors.

Active loops save you from tuning, but may result in inter-modulation products due to strong signals. Also your receiver may suffer from this (in that case you need some form of preselection).

From my own experience, loops do best up to the low HF. Above about 5 MHz, the performance difference between a loop and a vertical capacitive antenna (stick) is minimal. Of course when mounted at a rotor, the loop has the advantage of directivity for low elevation signals.

Before buying any loop (or spending a lot of money on parts), first try one to make sure it solves your problem. When you are interested in one band only, you can make a provisional tuned loop yourself to see the improvement over your existing antenna.

Try to get in contact with a radio amateur (HAM) group. Almost sure people over there will share their knowledge. You may also post in rec.radio.amateur.antenna

Another less known method is to make a thick single-turn un-tuned loop with natural balun function in it (that are loops where the tubing is cut at the top of the loop). An example of a small strip-ype loop is given here: http://www.tetech.nl/divers/small_H_FieldLoop2.jpg . Go the shack with low loss cable and do the tuning (and matching) in the shack. For transmitting this is no good option, but for reception only, this gives good results and you have the tuning/matching unit indoors adjacent to your receiver.

Best regards,

I never said anything about Bush until he went into Iraq to kill over a million people for oil at tax payer expense ($1T) to create profit for oil companies and Haliburton. (who then moved their company to Saudi arabia)

Only time I rejoiced in Bush's failure was when he lost the election

Why don't you build a passive loop antenna? A loop antenna around 50 foot circumference will not need amplification. You can build it out of coax cable and split the shield halfway around the loop so it is shield balanced. A loop this size as a square is only about 12 foot a side.
It's cheap and easy to build.

I can say this much, and of course it is just my opinion.

But from everything I know and have studied for sixteen years about deception, be it from body language or the voice and recently through handwriting analysis.

There was absolutely NOTHING, ziltch - nada that led me to believe that he was nothing but honest in answering allegations of child molestation.

Ninety nine per cent of the time when someone is either being deceptive or just flat out lying there is some sign, be it body language or even the tonality of specific words depending on what the question was or actual physical signs are visible.

If this was truly the case and IMO he was completely innocent of those charges, MANY MANY people owe this man an apology.

FWIW, I never purchased anything when it came to MJ, I liked some of his music without question.
But I wasn't a Michael Jackson fan.

I think he had that "doctor" as his personal physician, probably paid him a couple million a year to be with him. No one ever told MJ "No you can't".....IMO even doctors. If he wanted a shot of demerol, even if the doc told Michael it wasn't a good idea, the bottom line was.....he was going to get the shot or the doctor was going to be finding himself another job IMO.

I bet when MJ dropped after that shot of demerol, that doctor just about had a bowel movement. I bet he was trying anything and everything to get a beat of his heart because he knew/knows that if he died simply because the demerol suppressed his breathing to the point that it literally stopped his breathing and in turn the heart goes nuts, this doctor is in a heap of doo doo. Just my take.:-)

I actually meant to indicate a broadband active loop as the Wellbrook model, mistakingly I chose to include "tuned".
Very good advice! Thanks for pointing me in the right direction.
My main receivers are: Icom R71A(Kiwa memory board installed), Icom R-75, Kenwood TS-140(receive only), Kenwood R-1000, Drake R8.
Portables: Grundig Satellit E1, Grundig Satellit 800, Sony SW-55, Sony ICF-2010, Sony ICF 5900W & 6500W. Many others waiting for a quiet antenna.
Main listening interests: Ham 80/40 metre and utility stations(military, gov't, marine, air etc.).
With the current lack of strong signals I'm trying to supply as near a noise free signal as possible. Thus the magnetic loop design.

Hello Justtis,

When you want to make a tunable loop (so tuning at the loop, or very close to it), you don't need an amplifier in most cases.

Tuning (with reasonable match) has the advantage of large signal output for relative small loops and rejection of strong out of band signals. Also it is easier to get a good balance to avoid conducted interference traveling via the coaxial feeder to the loop antenna.

Disadvantage is that you have to tune when changing band or frequency and the tuning unit is outdoors.

Active loops save you from tuning, but may result in inter-modulation products due to strong signals. Also your receiver may suffer from this (in that case you need some form of preselection).

From my own experience, loops do best up to the low HF. Above about 5 MHz, the performance difference between a loop and a vertical capacitive antenna (stick) is minimal. Of course when mounted at a rotor, the loop has the advantage of directivity for low elevation signals.

Before buying any loop (or spending a lot of money on parts), first try one to make sure it solves your problem. When you are interested in one band only, you can make a provisional tuned loop yourself to see the improvement over your existing antenna.

Try to get in contact with a radio amateur (HAM) group. Almost sure people over there will share their knowledge. You may also post in rec.radio.amateur.antenna

Another less known method is to make a thick single-turn un-tuned loop with natural balun function in it (that are loops where the tubing is cut at the top of the loop). An example of a small strip-ype loop is given here: http://www.tetech.nl/divers/small_H_FieldLoop2.jpg . Go the shack with low loss cable and do the tuning (and matching) in the shack. For transmitting this is no good option, but for reception only, this gives good results and you have the tuning/matching unit indoors adjacent to your receiver.

Best regards,

Wim

I, too have huge doubts about the allegations against Jackson.

There are two possibilities here:

1) Jackson did nothing, and these two families were gold diggers looking to get rich quick through allegations of sexual misconduct that are difficult to impossible to defend against.

OR

2) Jackson did molest the kids, and the parents are still gold diggers, and some of the worst parents on the planet. Would any parent that cared about their child let someone slide on molesting their child just because someone gave them money to keep quiet?

Then there's the fact that the last case actually went to the jury, and he still wasn't convicted.

I'll let God sort it out. Only Him, the kids and Jackson know the truth anyway.

Another new word could be 'gropies', as in:

It fits right into popular music's folklore.

Hell, yes...please don't be naive, Brenda. The radio actor that played 'Leroy' (with the high voice) on "The Great Gildersleeve" show was playing the part of a 12 year old kid when in reality he was 40. Why?
Because he started out as a child radio actor and when his voice started to change, his mother had him castrated. Every now and again, you hear in the news about a mother selling her baby for a few hundred bucks. So, for 21 million dollars, the rotten parents might go along with a little of Jackson's "touchy-feely" with their kid.

Possibly you and the other poster are overlooking something painfully obvious -- Jackson's own words from his own lips on a national TV interview saying it was OK to get in bed with young kids. On the national interview, I'm sure he didn't intend it to be overtly sexual, but it certainly was somewhere between pretty bizarre at the least and a de facto admission of guilt at the worst.

As parents of two children, our kids may have gotten in bed with us on rare occasions (when they were sick or scared of a particularly violent thunderstorm) up to the age of two or so -- but I don't think any of Jackson's child "visitors" were that young, to say nothing of the fact that he wasn't their parent.

Where there is smoke, there is fire?

That's exactly what the 911 call supports. The caller was asked if he'd seen anything. He said, no, only the doctor saw. He was asked about CPR, and replied that the doctor was performing it right now. In the background, you hear the doctor moaning and sobbing.

Brenda Ann, it was nice to see you saying that, that you had your doubts also. I trust your judgement in many things and you know that.

It'll no doubt be interesting to see where all this goes.

Something I was thinking about earlier today.
Without sounding too crass, after watching video of those poor children having to go around in masks.
Sadly, I feel those children will now finally have a real chance at just being normal children.

Another thing you may have known, but I didn't.
I didn't know that MJ wasn't the actual "biological father." The lady on tv said that it was common knowledge with the ones "in the knows" who the actual sperm donor was and that Michael picked him.

I found that shocking, I didn't have a clue. Do you have any idea who the real daddy is?

Sadly IMO, Farrah's death has been over shadowed by Michael's passing. What a week for Hollywood.

And that of Ed McMahon. They say these things come in threes.. but I don't think I've ever seen all three come within 36 hours of each other before...

Joe. Make no mistake about it. I "totally" know where you are coming from.

But you are looking at MJ's tv interview (about 'sharing your bed with a child') the way people like you and I and I am sure the majority of everyone else in the group looks at things.

You have to remember who we are speaking about here. You are talking about an adult who NEVER got to experience childhood. Think about that.

That is almost more than you or anyone else in this group can comprehend. I know I can't. I really thought about that the other day, trying to "put myself there." I know mentally it made me feel extremely sad and I was just putting myself in a state to try to experience what he had to have felt.<shaking my head.> Pretty sad.

Now picture yourself being blessed with the talent that he had and the utter disdain he felt for his dad.
Now picture having all the monies you could ever want and finally being rid of your dad. I think he was so afraid he was starting to...or going to look like his father that he had all that cosmetic surgery, and he went to far.

Is it any wonder he surrounded himself with children? They were the only ones he felt he could trust and then even THAT was taken away from him.

I don't know. Like I said, I'm pretty studied in the subject of deception and I'm telling you....there was NOTHING in any of his interviews that even gave a clue of impropriety.
Like BA said, "let God sort it out."

But maybe now those children can have some semblance of a normal life.
Just my take.

Yes Telemundoh, fixating. This gay invention thing of yours is just weird, as weird as some of your other ideas, about Obama's BC in some ways.. The kooktard is strong in you..

Problem is, you notice things that aren't there, and/or don't exist.
Symptoms of extreme kooktardery. The Obama BC thing proves it.

> Think again Kookaburra.

So what's going to be your next delusion? I'm sure you'll think something up before the end of the month.

No doubt..lol. The way you stated that struck me as funny. I think ole' doc slipped out the back door before the medics arrived. A crazy sad ending no doubt.

The two of you stroking each other with dozens of posts literally bombing the news group is not fixating on my behalf Kookaburra. One can't read the news group without stepping in it crap that you and the ugly Canadian left behind.

Yeah, those many dozens of posts on numerous occasions with the two of you stroking each other don't exist right?

Delusions? Do I need to list all those posts for you? What a Kookaburra.

ROTFL, he only posts like once a week. Never heard of a killfile, have you? A few dozen posts isn't "bombing", not even close to it. You're just such an easily angered snapper, it's just fun to bait you.

You always go for it.

Stroking? BWHAHAHAHAA! How interesting that you use that word. How

And do you want me to post your Obama BC stuff? I hope not, that would embarrass your already humiliated family and friends, if you have any friends at this point, as mental problems tend to make people back away.

I fired up my RCA Victor Strato-World.
Coupled it to the AD DX Sloper, and I still can copy it.

That's pretty cool, after it warms up here in about ten more minutes I won't get the drift I'm getting now. Not bad for an old portable tube radio. Bill Meacham (remember him) totally redid that radio for me probably six/seven years ago, what a difference it made after he got done with it.

If you play with Fire, you are bound to get burnt.

Couple of days ago, I was using the Yard King (brand name) 6.5 horsepower self propelled lawn mower my old buddy gave me for free.When I got through using that lawn mower, I absentmindly laid my left hand on the metal exhaust cover thingy.
YEOWWWWWW!!!! it burnt the pizz out of my left hand! It still hurts a little bit now.

Wow, that was a good find and couldn't have been said better IMO. Could have been done without the obscenities though IMO.

The part though I somewhat disagree with. I thought after seeing the premises he rented, that the driveway was completely devoid of the size for ambulance that needed to get in there.

It almost seemed as if the ambulance should have backed up "in" the driveway instead of the other way around.

At the angle that extremely wide ambulance was at, it took the driver at least three times to pull up and then back up to try an avoid gate or concrete (and that is just what was shown.)

When time was of the essense, it seemed it took awfully long just to back out of the driveway. Not that it would have made any difference, more than likely not. Just saying.

That is what I was thinking also. But apparently only a couple months ago, everything in Neverland was auctioned off.

Can you imagine going to see that exhibit, never knowing what was going to transpire, or maybe even purchasing some of things Michael had?

Excerpted from Philadelphia Doctorate Course, Tape #58

This tape is from a 1952 lecture series by L. Ron Hubbard, founder of Scientology and Dianetics; here, he expounds on the nature, origin, and usefulness of calculus:

"Rate of change is this mathematics known as Calculus. Calculus, it's a very interesting thing, is divided into two classes -- there's Differential Calculus and Integral Calculus. The Differential Calculus is in the first part of the textbook on Calculus, and Integral Calculus is in the second part of the textbook on Calculus. As you look through the book, you'll find in the early part of the book on Calculus, "dx" over "dy", a little "dx", and a little "dy" -- and one's above the other on a line -- predominates in the front part of the book, but as you get to the end of the book you find these "dx" and "dy"s preceded by a summation sign, or are equating to a summation sign, and the presence of this shows that we are in the field of Integral Calculus.

Now I hope you understand this, because I've never been able to make head nor tail of it. It must be some sort of a Black Magic operation, started out by the Luce cult -- some immoral people who are operating up in New York City, Rockefeller Plaza -- been thoroughly condemned by the whole society. Anyway, their rate-of-change theory -- I've never seen any use for that mathematics, by the way -- I love that mathematics, because it -- I asked an engineer, one time, who was in his 6th year of engineering, if he'd ever used Calculus, and he told me yeah, once, once I did, he said. When did you use it? And he said I used it once. Let me see, what did you use it on? Oh yeah. Something on the rate-of-change of steam particles in boilers. And then we went out and tested it and found the answer was wrong. “

Fast forward to 1997.

Larry Sarner, an inventor who developed a non-working voting machine, is embroiled in litigation with Peter Paul Luce, son of Henry Luce, founder of Time and the person referred to by Hubbard.

Coincidence? Perhaps not.

Sarner, in addition to being a failed inventor, is also a leading figure in pseudoscience and quackery. He has many bizarre ideas about things and a unique approach to the scientific method.

It is not clear if his understanding of calculus comes from L. Ron Hubbard or not. It is, however, quite clear that Sarner practices propaganda in a manner nearly identical to that used by the Church of Scientology against critics, former members, politicians and journalists.

Sarner needed money for his crank scheme. He may have known it did not work.

Frustrated by his inability to promote his pseudoscientific ideas, he may have sought to take revenge on the son of the person Hubbard thought invented calculus. Hubbard, who seems to have been widely read, must not have not known about Newton and Leibniz.

These machines appear to be Sarner's only invention. He has no other patents listed in his name.

Some time after the Luce debacle, Sarner seems to have joined forces with the "Cooler Heads Coalition" of the Competitive Enterprise Institute (CEI). The CEI is a front for the oil and tobacco industries. One of their most basic ideas is that global warming is a fiction (possibly in the same way that Sarner may view calculus as a fiction).

The head of CEI's Cooler Heads Coalition is Myron Ebell. Ebell has no scientific training, and, until recently, he and CEI associate Marlo Lewis received six figure retainers from the likes of ExxonMobil.

Another CEI "expert" is John Berlau.

Berlau is an expert in hot air, which he produces in great quantity!

Berlau tried being a journalist. He should have been an inquisitor. One person said of Berlau: "He asks a question; he expects an answer"

If the answer did not come and was not to Berlau's liking, out came the whips, thumbscrews, and hot oil!

Seriously, Berlau is another expert with no scientific training. He believes that DDT is nontoxic and good for the environment. He believes that trees pollute more than cars.

Hot air? He was once asked some basic scientific questions. When asked what happens to a gas when heated, he pondered the then opined that it became heavier.

Got Berlau? Got Hot Air Expertise!

Sarner spends a great deal of time attacking psychological and psychiatric therapies; not surprising if you keep in mind that Hubbard attempted to establish Dianetics, the forerunner to Scientology, as an alternative to psychology and psychiatry.

Sarner and his wife, Linda Rosa, run a blog about child torture. This is nothing if not reprehensible. They should establish an organization called "Advocates for Child Torture" (ACT) and invite Dick Cheney, Alberto Gonzalez and Lynndie England to be on its board of directors!

A current contributor to the blog is Charly D. Miller. Miller writes “opinion papers” that Sarner refers to as “incisive;” the problem with many of these papers is that they are full of copyrighted material.

Sarner and Rosa also collaborate with Jean Mercer and Monica Pignotti.

Mercer holds a Ph.D. from Brandeis University, but she has never held a license; this means she has never practiced, never seen a patient. She operates a blog for Psychology Today.

When people came to the blog and questioned her lack of experience and associations with the likes of Sarner, Ebell, and Berlau, she closed the blog to comments. From enlightenment to totalitarianism, in a nansecond!

Pignotti is a former Scientologist. She renounced that. Several years later, she became a proponent and practitioner of Roger Callahan’s equally bizarre Thought Field Therapy and Voice Technology. Now she has abandoned those to work with Sarner, Mercer, Rosa, Ebell, and Berlau.

Pignotti has also joined in litigation with Andrew Langer. Langer is ex-CEI, and currently operates the perversely named Institute for Liberty. Langer is an outspoken opponent of free speech!

Also ex-CEI is Brooke Oberwetter. If Oberwetter’s name seems familiar, it is because her father, James Oberwetter, was George Bush’s ambassador to Saudi Arabia.

Brooke is with a shadowy consultancy called DC Signal. It seems they may be playing a role in these various propaganda campaigns.

Hardie Board Construction Board

I wonder how that s.it would do for a roof on my old trailer?
About a month ago, I was floatin around in the Home Deeeeeepot store, abouts six miles West of doggy's couch.I saw that Hardie board crap.A piece of one of those Hardie boards was brokn off/missing.That (cement fiber) Hardie board looked to me like it was manufactured from recycled old style paper/cardboard egg crate material.

I was wondering the ear plugs that law enforcement wear...would it be practical to wear with a radio ? does the jack fit into the standard radio (the same way regular headphones do) anyone ever try this ? do they work good, does it come with a mic ? it seems that police always hear what they need to using one ear...where are these purchased?

I had to jump back over to the Lowe's store for a box of three inch long wood screws and some Titebond exterior wood glue.I might actually get a few more 2'' by 4'' studs on my old trailer frame today.The terrible heat and the terrible humidity over here is Hell on Wheels today, it is causing me to barely drag my feet around like a little old bag lady.We need some rain real bad.

of agreement that's stroking.

Only strange in your mind pervert and that's very telling.

I hate this thing and it is the only Ventura attraction on this site.
The artist must have been doing drugs when he made this thing. You really can't appreciate how ugly this monstrosity is until you see it in

For sale: Rare Sanyo shortwave portable model RP-8880. Has numerous knobs and such for tuning and sound controls. Has DIN input in back for phono or tape. Radio works on all bands except for SW. From what I can gather this is a common issue with this radio as the FET gets blown due to static charge. There is a simple fix for this as documented online. I will leave this to the buyer. All other bands work fine. In good cosmetic condition. One of the rack ears has been reglued at one point but it is not noticeable.

Asking $200 including shipping within the US. Or best offer. See link below for picture of actual radio:

I mispelled the name, actually, it is Weatherby.Back in the 1950s, my dad snail mail subscribed to Field And Stream and Sports Afield magazines.Of course I used to read the magazines too.There still are some of those magazines I saved, I put them in the attic of my house.Nowadays, I am too wobbly to go up into my attic.One time a few years ago I was up there and I missed a step and my foot went through the drywall ceiling in one of my hall closets.A guy at a construction company gave me a piece of left over scrap drywall and some of that goop and I patched that hole.

I use the ALA100 with home brew loops. Damn good, but you are right that it is expensive. The ALA100 is the cheapest of the Wellbrook products. They have some variants of it now. You need a good radio to use an untuned loop since it delivers a huge amount of RF.

I suspect the ALA100 is just a wideband transformer and a common gate amp. You can get North Hills wideband transformers on ebay. I have a few of these transformers, but haven't got around to trying to make a home brew wellbrook. I found half a dozen North Hills 1301LB transformers in a surplus shop and wiped out their stock at $6 a pop.
Oh, and I'm being a jerk and hoarding them.

If you don't want to pay for a North Hills transformer, I suspect any passive video over twisted pair transformer will do the trick.

I was thinking of using one unbal to bal to feed the source of a depletion mode JFET, ground the gate, then use the balanced end of another transformer as the load, tying the free end to the power supply, bypassed to ground, and of course the other end in series with the drain. Then feed the unbalanced side to the radio.

If you had enough of these transformers, you could probably make a multicoupler using the same dcheme. Instead of one transformer in the path of the source, use several.

There is some misconception that the Wellbrook loops are shielded. the pipe that you see is the loop itself.

I hear that in the latest Oxford dictionary, under the definition of moron, they have a photo of you Telemundoh. You do the definition justice.

How you manage to survive is nothing short of amazing. You have no ability to logically extrapolate and an exceptionally limited capacity to comprehend.

Maybe Telly is blubbering on-line because someone busted him up? I can't say that I know too many conspiracy nutcases but they all tend to hover in their little universes strictly by the powers of their own delusions.

I could be wrong and maybe Telly is blubbering because he hasn't had a drink in awhile and really craves one ...

I know that I shouldn't go after wounded prey but sometimes I have to make an exception.

The only research that Telemundoh does involves searching for other kooktards. I can just imagine these guys with their Cheetos and flat Sprites giving each other moral support with their kooktard conspiracies. The drug companies would pay good $$$ to use a few of those guys in clinical trials.

Yep, he seems good with electronics and that's something he should stick with. Why he went to the kooktard end no one probably knows. But it doesn't take much. A slight imbalance with his brain chemistry and he becomes kooktard central. He really should get himself checked out.

You really need to deal with your fantasies in a more rationale manner.
Did you get dumped recently, Telemundoh?

So stop whining about the cost and build a low cost passive loop. It if works well but you still need further improvement it will at least tide you over.

All the amplification does for you is allow the loop to be smaller, which may mostly be a convenience depending on the environment.

Be sure to build a balanced loop that only responds to the magnetic field.

A vanity plate for a vain person such as Telemundoh! He's not afraid to be a kooktard in the newsgroup so maybe he wouldn't be afraid to be display his kooktard conspiracies on his vehicle? I can see his car peppered with stickers along the lines of "My other conspiracy involves persecution" or "Aliens came down and hypnotized me".

I was surprised that no one had yet posted about this.

"Billy Mays" - the pitchman for Oxyclean and other numerous products was found dead today by his wife in bed at the age of 50. That number seems to be making its rounds lately.

They don't know if this has anything to do with it, but yesterday the plane he was on had an extremely rough landing.

According to reports, the two front tires of the plane blew up on landing.

Billy was interviewed coming off the plane by news crews. He said it was "extremely rough" and that the masks and everything above his head came down.

He said he was struck on the head but "not to worry"....that he has a hard head.
Autopsy will be performed tomorrow to see if that had anything to do with it.

His wife said Billy said "he wasn't feeling well" when he turned in last night around 10-10:30pm.

Weird week. So now I expect Patrick Swayze to pass and there should be one other to finish this "other set of three."

Yeah Cuhulin, I didn't see your post till after I posted on it.

There is definitely something eerie going on this month. Though Billy Mays wasn't as "big" as the other three that just died, he definitely was known by many.

It's going to be interesting to see if that rough plane landing had anything to do with it or was that just a strange coincidence.

It may be that Billy Mays suffered a concussion (in that Airplane) that killed him.Regardless of how hard some people might think their skull is, it isn't THAT hard! Merely falling down hard enough on the dirt can be enough to do it.And as we age, we lose calcium from our bones and that makes those old bones weaker.Billy Mays was a Good old boy.
Rest in Peace, Billy Mays.

Yeah, not having to worry about brain damage would he a huge plus for them. Telly goes sour, and his family sues, and the drug company says, "Now wait a minute, the guy was a birthtard, so he was already near

His family would probably settle for a $50 gift card for Outback at that

He probably saw one of the other Obama birthtards say something about it on a kookpage. He's too sane to think up RFID scares, and way way too sane to become an Obama birthtard, like yourself.

That takes some serious derangement.

I saw your other post on the subject. Feeding a loop to a 50 ohm input of a radio will not work well since once side of the loop will be at ground. This is where the wideband transformer comes into play. You can float the loop above ground if you have the transformer. It is possible to do the same with a differential amp, but good transformer would be lower noise.

What about an "target region" ordering for the tx??

like:

(only problem might be S-EU, SW-EU etc have to put the EU targets together and can't program "alphabetically"... S-EU would be after S-AM, and not

I saw your other post on the subject. Feeding a loop to a 50 ohm input of a radio will not work well since once side of the loop will be at ground. This is where the wideband transformer comes into play. You can float the loop above ground if you have the transformer. It is possible to do the same with a differential amp, but good transformer would be lower noise.

Descriptions of Allah
Published by Alyaa on 2009/4/19 (38 reads) The Qur'an, however, attributes to Allah (Subhanahu Wa Ta'ala) certain descriptions like for instance:
The Beneficent is firmly established on the throne.(20:5)
Everything will perish except his Countenance.(28:88)

That you are brought up under my eye.(20:29)

Allah's hand is above their hands.(48:10)

The heavens are rolled in his right hand.(39:67)

One whom I created with my two hands.(38:75)

And the like. How can we understand these descriptions? Does Allah (Subhanahu Wa Ta'ala) have organs similar to ours? These and other verses in the Qur'an are part of what is called allegorical verses in the holy book whose real meaning only Allah (Subhanahu Wa Ta'ala) knows. This is referred to in the following verse:

It is He who has sent down to you the book, in it are verses of established meaning, they are the foundation of the book while others are allegorical. But those in whose hearts is perversion follow what is allegorical in it seeking discord and attempting to interpolate it. No one, however, knows its real interpretation except Allah. Those who are firmly grounded in knowledge say: we believe in it; each is from our lord. No one will remember except those who have reason.(3:7)

Based on this verse and following the injunctions of prophet Muhammad p.b.u.h. Early scholars including leaders of the major four schools of thought took the following attitude. They said: we believe in these descriptions of Allah (Subhanahu Wa Ta'ala) but leave the knowledge of their reality to Allah (Subhanahu Wa Ta'ala). We should abstain from interpreting them on the lines of similar descriptions ascribed to humans; this is simply because as prophet Muhammad p.b.u.h. Warned us: think of Allah's creation and never think of Allah, for you will never appreciate him as he deserves.(6) also Muslim scholars said that whatever we think of Allah (Subhanahu Wa Ta'ala), he is totally different from what we think about him. In sahih Muslim Abu Hurairah said: people will continue to argue and dispute until it is said: this is the creation of Allah who created Allah? Whoever finds anything like this let him say: i believe in Allah.(7) we glorify Allah (Subhanahu Wa Ta'ala) from the imagined description that might come to our minds. This is because it is impossible for Allah (Subhanahu Wa Ta'ala) to be similar to mortals. Commenting on the verse that says:

Ummu Salama wife of prophet Muhammad said: it is not possible to imagine how, but the divine establishment on the throne is not unknown; faith requires that we accept this without any questions for denying it borders on disbelief. The same attitude is adopted by early scholars like Imam Malek and many others. Prominent scholars even today have the same conviction. Another group of scholars, however, tend to interpret these divine attributes in such a manner that becomes the glory of Allah (Subhanahu Wa Ta'ala) although they warn against taking them to be literally equivalent to human qualities. One example of their approach is their interpretation of verse 75 chapter 38 where they took the two hands of Allah (Subhanahu Wa Ta'ala) to be only for confirmation and to assert Allah (Subhanahu Wa Ta'ala)'s care of his slave Adam.

In addition to the above two approaches the closer of which to Islamic creed is the former although the latter is not excluded, there were some perverted attitudes influenced by alien philosophies like the Greek and other philosophies. One claimed that all these descriptions are identical to human ones. Another group gave incarnate descriptions of Allah (Subhanahu Wa Ta'ala) while a third group went to the other extreme and denied all description of Allah (Subhanahu Wa Ta'ala). These groups died in the bud; and the only ones that remained to exist are the first two which are very close to each other. The Qur'an gives us a conclusive answer when it says about Allah (Subhanahu Wa Ta'ala):

Nothing is like Him and He is the Hearer, the Seer. (42:11)

Based on this verse we can safely confirm these descriptions but we do not compare them to any others. Rather we believe in them and accept them as they are.

Allah (Subhanahu Wa Ta'ala) does not perish:

Every soul will taste of death; and you will be paid your wages on the day of judgement. Whoever is removed from the fire and is made to enter paradise, he indeed is triumphant; and the life of the world is but comfort of illusion. (3:185)

One God in Heaven and Earth:

And He it is who is in heaven is God, and in the earth God; and he is the Wise, the Knower. And blessed be he unto whom belongs the sovereignty of heavens and earth and what is between them and with him is the knowledge of the hour; and to him you will be returned. And those unto whom they cry instead of him possess no power of intercession, save them who bear witness to the truth in a state of knowledge. If you ask them who created them, they will surely say: Allah. How then are they turned away?(43:84-88)

Allah (Subhanahu Wa Ta'ala) is the only lord of all:

Lord of the east and the west, there is no God save him. So choose him alone for your defender. (73:9)

A conclusive verse about Allah (Subhanahu Wa Ta'ala) is the one towards the end of chapter two that says:

Unto Allah belongs whatsoever is in heavens and whatsoever is in the earth; and whether you reveal what is in yourselves or conceal it Allah will bring you to account for it. He will forgive whom he will and he will punish whom he will and Allah is capable of all things. The messenger (Muhammad) believed in that which was revealed to him from his Lord and so did believers. Each one believed in Allah, His angels, His books and His messengers; and they said: we heard and we obeyed. Your forgiveness our Lord. Unto You is the journeying. Allah tasks not a soul beyond its capacity. For it is that which it has earned and against it is that which it committed. Our Lord! Condemn us not if we forget or err. Our Lord! Lay not on us such a burden as you did lay on those before us. Our Lord! Impose not on us that which we have not the strength to bear. And pardon us, forgive us and have mercy on. You are our protector. So grant us victory over disbelieving folk. (2:284-286)

The ninety nine attributes:

Prophet Muhammad p.b.u.h. Said: "Allah has ninety nine names one hundred minus one, whoever counts them will enter paradise".(8) the Qur'an also confirms this fact:

Unto Allah belong the most beautiful attributes, appeal to Him through them; and leave the company of those who blaspheme his names. They will be requited what they used to do.(7:180)

And again:

Allah: there is no God save Him. His are the most beautiful names. (20:8)

So according to these statements and verses of the Qur'an what are the ninety nine names of Allah (Subhanahu Wa Ta'ala)? They are mentioned in the Qur'an. We already quoted the greatest verse in the Qur'an called the verse of the divine chair 2:255. Sometimes the Qur'an mentions a number of these divine names together. Sometimes a couple of them conclude some verses of the Qur'an and this happens very often in the holy book. Numerous verses are concluded with two attributes of Allah (Subhanahu Wa Ta'ala) that are appropriate to the context and the theme of the verses. If the context is one that extols the power and wisdom of Allah (Subhanahu Wa Ta'ala), then the conclusion is thus: and he is the mighty, the wise. If the verse speaks about forgiveness and mercy, then the conclusion is thus: and he is the all-forgiving, the merciful and so on and so forth. Most of the time many verses are concluded with two attributes; and very rarely with one.

Before we review the ninety nine names or attributes of Allah (Subhanahu Wa Ta'ala) let us quote a few verses that mention several divine names. In chapter 59 we read:

He is Allah, than whom there is no other God; the Knower of the unseen and visible. He is the Beneficent, the Merciful. He is Allah, than whom there is no other God, the Sovereign Lord, the Holy One, the Peace, the Keeper of faith, the Guardian, the Majestic, the Compeller, the Superb. Glorified be Allah from all that they ascribe as partners (to him). He is Allah the Creator, the Evolver, the Fashioner. His are the most beautiful names; and He is the Mighty, the Wise.(59:22-24)

Now that we have reviewed some divine attributes, let us enumerate the ninety nine names that any one who counts them and believes in them will enter paradise.

Allah is: the Beneficent, the Merciful, the Sovereign, the Holy One, the Source of Peace, the Guardian of Faith, the Overwhelming, the Mighty, the Irresistible, the Supreme, the Creator, the Evolver, the Fashioner, the Ever Forgiving, the Subduer, the Grantor of Bounties, the Provider, the All-Knowing Judge, the All- Knower, the Withholder, the Extender, the Abaser, the Exalter, the Honourer, the Humiliator, the All-Hearer, the All-Seer, the Arbiter, the Justice, Beyond All Comprehension, the All-Aware, the Most Forebearing, the Glorious, the Oft- Forgiver, the Most Thankful, the Mot High, the Greatest, the Guardian, the Saviour, the Holder of Careful Accounts, the Majestic, the Generous, the Watcher, the Rresponder, the All-Eembracing, the Wise, the Most Loving, the Owner of Glory, the Resurrector, the Witness, the Truth, the Most Trusted One, the Powerful, the Steadfast, the Patron, the Praiseworthy, the Keeper of All Statistics, the Beginner of Creation, the Restorer of life, the Giver of life, the Causer of death, the Ever Living, the Self Subsisting, the Founder, the Deserver of all Praise and Honour, the One, the Eternal Absolute, the Capable, the Omnipotent, the Forwarder, the Giver of Respite, the First, the Last, the Manifest, the Invisible, the Protector, the Most Eminent, the Source of All Good, the Acceptor of Repentance, the Punisher, the Pardoner, the Most Kind, the Owner of the Universe, the Lord of Majesty, Bounty and Honour, the Just, the Gatherer, the Self Sufficient, the Giver of Wealth, the Preventer, the Harmer, the Giver of Profit, the Light, the Guide, the Orginator, the Everlasting, the Inheritor, the Most Upright, the Most Patient.

These are the important divine names agreed upon by many scholars based on the Qur'an. It is not enough, however, to enter paradise just to count the ninety nine divine attributes mentioned earlier, but one has to believe in them seriously and to manifest his belief in pious actions. So it is not simply a lip service to them; but rather the sincere commitment to these attributes that brings salvation and bliss.

There are also other names of Allah (Subhanahu Wa Ta'ala); some scholars counted more than two hundred as Imam al-Qurtubi says in his Qur'anic interpretation volume 7 page 325. One may notice some similarities in the names, or may even claim the existence of repetition among them. This is not the case. It is only the difficulty to translate their meanings that might give this wrong impression.

I remember once an argument between a Muslim scholar and a Christian priest. The latter imagined that he caught something against Islam when he said: you blame us for saying that god is a trinity while you have ninety nine gods. The Muslim scholar laughed and then said: don't confuse between attributes or names of the one god, and the trinity which is three persons. These attributes describe the only one god in his capacities, qualities and actions. They all refer to the same god, the one divine being.

Some perverted people evolved some so-called miracles around number 19. They said that it is composed of two simple numbers, namely 1 which is the first simple number. Thus they claim that it refers to god being the first, and 9 which is the last simple number, thus, according to them it refers to god as the last. Based on these claims they said that this number refers to Allah (Subhanahu Wa Ta'ala) the first and the last and they thus claim that it is the foundation of the Qur'an. They then took one more step and said that the first verse in the Qur'an which occurs at the beginning of every chapter of the holy book namely: in the name of Allah, the beneficent, the merciful is composed in Arabic of 19 letters. Then they began to make baseless conclusions. They even reached the extreme and said that the day of judgement will take place after more than 250 years or so and their leader finally declared himself a messenger of Allah (Subhanahu Wa Ta'ala)! The fact of the matter is that the whole theory falls to ashes when we confirm that the said verse on which they based their theory is, in fact, 21 letters and not 19. The Qur'an or god, for that matter, does not need these baseless claims. He is enough for believers and his book the Qur'an, introduces him without the need of any further theories.

God is not Muhammad:

Some non-Muslim writers call Muslims Muhammadans and Islam Muhammadanism as an analogy of Christianity called after Jesus Christ, Buddhism called after buddha etc. Muslims do not worship Muhammad or any other. Their only deity is Allah (Subhanahu Wa Ta'ala) the god. Muhammad was nothing but the trusted conveyer of Allah (Subhanahu Wa Ta'ala)'s message. The most honourable title given to Muhammad in the holy Qur'an is that he is the slave and messenger of Allah (Subhanahu Wa Ta'ala) almighty. He himself warned his followers not to raise him above his human status. He said: only say i am the slave and messenger of Allah.(9)

Another important distortion that has to be clear is the claim that the Qur'an is the word of Muhammad. Time and again the Qur'an asserts that it is the revelation of Allah (Subhanahu Wa Ta'ala). The Qur'an says:

And if he (Muhammad) had invented false sayings concerning Us, We would assuredly had taken him by the right hand; and We would have then severed his life artery.(69:44-46)

About the Qur'an we read in the same holy book:

It is the revelation of the Lord of the Worlds; the Honest Spirit descended with it unto your heart (Muhammad) so that you may be one of the warners, in a clear Arabic tongue.(29:192-195)

Muhammad p.b.u.h. Was not the first but the last messenger of Allah (Subhanahu Wa Ta'ala). A series of prophets before him were sent by Allah (Subhanahu Wa Ta'ala) to different people at various times conveying the same message of Allah (Subhanahu Wa Ta'ala). The problem of some people is that they do not understand the position of prophets. On the one hand these prophets were not self appointed individuals who claimed divine descent but they were chosen by Allah (Subhanahu Wa Ta'ala) based on their piety and righteous deeds. And as all previous messages were changed or lost, Muhammad, the praised one, was sent by Allah (Subhanahu Wa Ta'ala) with the last message to the worlds. He is the last messenger simply because his message is the culmination and completion of all previous messages. That is why Allah (Subhanahu Wa Ta'ala) preserved the Qur'an. The holy book Muslims have today is exactly the same book revealed to Muhammad p.b.u.h. Over fourteen centuries ago. Why then should we have another message or another prophet?

To conclude, this is how Allah (Subhanahu Wa Ta'ala) is described in the Qur'an the word of Allah (Subhanahu Wa Ta'ala) to all the worlds. It is time to listen to Allah (Subhanahu Wa Ta'ala) and believe in his word that shows us the way to him and to salvation. This booklet is just an attempt to guide the fair minded people to Allah (Subhanahu Wa Ta'ala) the Almighty the Only Lord.

Gay bait, brain damage, and families suing drug companies. These are just a few of the retarded thoughts you had today.

Any normal person would go out of their mind if they had to listen you all day.

Answering a earlier clueless question you had, you are pretty screwed up.

It works very well. I have several loop antennas.

The transformer is not necessary for a connection to the coax or a balanced amplifier input.

You could clamp a few ferrite cores around the coax lead-in to the radio at the antenna connection to block noise coming from the radio if you don't already have the radio plugged into a EMI noise suppression power strip.

ROTFL, at least I'm not imagining that Obama wasn't born in Hawaii.

Keep telling yourself that, and keep saying Obama was born in Kenya, too.

And we can keep laughing at you birthtards.

you don't think Obama was born in Hawaii, and there's a conspiracy to cover it up. They will fix you right up with the help you need, no

Just an additional comment, Telemundoh. Leave it to you to try to make something more out of it than it is. But then again, that's how you live your life as a birthtard, isn't it? Making things up?

LOL, there's nothing wrong with me, Telemundoh. I have no delusions like you do. Your birthtardic delusions alone prove you to be a high level whackjob.

LOL, ask your poor family, or your friends, if you have any. It's hard to beat a birthtard at the kook game. Even if I was a kook, it would take some serious drugs, and probably a major stroke to mess me up as much as you are.

Snap away..

Telemundoh, do you actually believe that 99% of people reading these posts doesn't judge you to be a total loon, just by reading about your Obama birthtardery?

You poor bastard...

Kind of like when you refuse to "learn" that Obama was born in Hawaii, not Kenya?

Has anyone listened to RCI's Maple Leaf Mailbag?

When I first picked it up, I was glad I found the program on Canadian shortwave...but wow...is this bad radio or what?

Is this a cheap way to fill an hour or so?

Anyone else?

Like you're a birthtard? I don't think so, Telemundoh. I don't have enough chemicals in my house to screw myself up to your level of fuckwittery..

It takes some profound brain damage to create a birthtard.

There is a guy who reads the newsbreaks on BBC_WS overnight with a deep cultured voice....with a British accent of course.

I believe he said his last name was "Munez"?

Based on the sound of his voice, he sounds black.....that's allI have to descibe hime. Anyone know more about him or his profile?

Just curious who this voice belongs to.

Thanks!

Nobody was born in Hawaii.They all came from Asia and got FAKE birth certificates.

I needs to go to the Lowe's store and then across Highway 18 from the Lowe's store to the Gestapo Wal Mart store for some oranges so I can sit on the back end of my trailer this afternoon and eat four oranges.There is a place near Gallatin Street and Highway 80 that sells discount wood.I wants to see what they have in the way of cheap plywood, if they have any.

What if "The Mahdi" returned today : and witnessed the Enormous Evil being commited constantly under a pretext of religious observation? What would His reaction be, and how would the faithful appear in light of the modern world (infidels)?

World's Shortest True and Happy Story

Once upon a time, a guy asked a girl "Will you marry me?"

The girl said, 'NO!'

And the guy lived happily ever after and rode motorcycles and went fishing and hunting and played golf a lot and drank beer and scotch and had tons of money in the bank and left the toilet seat up and farted whenever he wanted.

The End!

2263. iBiquity and the NSA?

Bob Struble - how come I have gotten searches from the NSA (md procurement office) from Linthicum? With your previous employers in Hanover and Linthicum, what does iBiquity and NSA have in common? Today, they searched on "HD Radio engineer" - any ideas? Perhaps, the NSA is helping iBiquity stay afloat with contracts, and is partly responsible for your arrogant attitude. Remember, back in the early 1990s, when you stole those engineers out of Linthicum, after the NSA slowdown? Although, your website says nothing about having to be US citizens to be considered for employment.

Wonder if they will ever have a "Farter's Day"?

Just think, we could wish all our buddies "Happy Farters Day".

Of course only our Buddies, not people like Talamon (Fucking Yankee) but just think, I bet Steve is a real farter living by himself and just able to lean back and let'em rip. Larry has to worry about gassing Doggy and married guys have to always look around first then it never fail that your wife will come walking in right after you let a quality fart go. (Murphy's Law)

All that brain damage the reason you can't come up with something new.

I'm well aware of Languages TK. Have a copy sitting in front of me.
But it is a lot of paper if you want a hard copy, whereas ADDX is a nice compact listing for general listening, that can be quickly copied. TK would be really great on a laptop sitting by the radio, for quick access. Don't have a laptop (yet) so use hard copies from the web of shorter lists. Computer room is quite remote from my radio shack, and others use the web a lot. Lots of choices out there for frequency lists. All the authors deserve much thanks...

Some of them wimmins are modest.They either go powder their nose or they step into another room when they have to break wind.They buy those scented perfume thingys that plug into wall outlets so people can't smell their farts.Perfumes date way back to ancient history when most people didn't take regular baths.

Way back in ancient times when some people would set some other people on fire and the fat from those people mixed with the ashes from the fires and then find it's way down to the rivers and streams where wimmin were doing their clothes washing, they found that the clothes got cleaner.That is how soap was invented.

Hmmm...I dont see anyone on the list with a similar sounding name.

I believe this list is just the presenters of programs (World Today, Outlook, etc) ...and not the people that actually do the "headline capsule" near the top of the hour.

If you heard this guys voice....you would remember it...Deep...Cultured....British.....and sounds like a black mans vocal patterns.

Thanks

Even if I did, it still wouldn't mess me up enough to become a birthtard.

Really, what would possibly be the point of anything else? Birthtardism is hard to top for laughs, Telemundoh. I know you really believe it, but it's so off the wall batshit crazy, it cracks the vast majority of us sane people up. And it makes you "fascinating" to my shrink ex-GF, she would love to talk to you in person. Shit, I bet she would pay you a decent amount of cash and buy you dinner to sit with her a couple hours, and just talk. I'm being serious, she would love to study you guys.

No, you were there, you know what happened. That can only be if you were there to witness the birth of the chosen one. Time to come clean

I could never compare myself to you for entertainment value.

So how is your therapy coming along? From my vantage point you don't seem to be making any progress. Some day, and I don't know what it would take, you will get off this stuck on stupid track.

Handy Shortwave Chart
Bill McFadden
billmc@agora.rdrop.com

Band allocations and time zone conversions for the USA. Includes broadcast bands used outside the USA. For multi-use bands, primary usage is shown.
Some stations operate outside official bands. Information is from Oct 2005 FCC rules and Jan 2006 NTIA manual, see Chapter 4 of:
http://www.ntia.doc.gov/osmhome/redbook/redbook.html

Frequencies are in kHz. Usual spacing in shortwave broadcast bands is 5 kHz. Frequencies above 10000 kHz tend to propagate better during the day; frequencies below 10000 kHz tend to propagate better at night.

Please e-mail suggestions and corrections to billmc@agora.rdrop.com.

Phone line as SW antenna
Bill McFadden
billmc@agora.rdrop.com

Changes preceded by "|".

WARNINGS AND DISCLAIMERS

Connecting unapproved devices to phone lines may be illegal in your area. Telephone lines present a potential shock hazard. Do not use this antenna for transmitting. Use at your own risk.

INTRODUCTION

This article describes how to use a phone line as a shortwave receiving antenna. Performance will vary depending on the kind of phone line you have. Overhead lines usually make okay antennas, while underground lines | usually don't. Phone lines carrying DSL service may be unsuitable because | DSL operates over a wide spectrum. A phone line antenna will generally pick up more power line noise than a dedicated antenna, so don't expect to | use it for DX work. Nevertheless, I found that it outperformed the
| telescopic whip antennas built into many portables.

A reader sent in this suggestion: If you're concerned about connecting the phone line directly to the receiver, try wrapping the phone cord several times around the receiver's telescopic whip antenna instead. Performance may not be as good as a direct connection, but it will probably be better than the whip antenna by itself.

Someone else wrote asking about lightning protection. I haven't thought much about it because thunderstorms are rare in my area. Most phone lines have lightning arrestors on them where they enter the house, but the lightning arrestors may pass enough energy during a lightning strike damage a receiver. My suggestion is to disconnect the antenna when not in use if you experience frequent thunderstorms.

HOW TO DO IT

The simplest connection is a single capacitor between the phone line and receiver. The capacitor eliminates all phone line voltages, including | ringing, so that they will not harm the receiver. The capacitor should | be rated 250 volts or higher.

Phone line RF connector
red .01 uF center cond. / \ or o--------||-----------------------------|-o | To receiver
green \ /
50 ohm coax |
ground |
or o-----------------------------------------+ N.C. shield

N.C. = no connect. I originally connected the phone line ground (yellow wire) to this terminal, but reception was better without it (if you do this, play it safe and put a .01 uF capacitor in series). If another ground is available, you can connect it to this terminal.

If you are picking up local AM or FM radio stations on the shortwave bands, it is likely that your receiver is overloaded. Inexpensive and portable receivers usually lack the filtering needed to eliminate this interference, but you can make your own filters. Filters can also be | purchased from shortwave dealers (see below for recommendations).

A high-pass filter can be used to remove signals below the shortwave bands. It rejects interference from local AM stations and presents a high impedance to the phone line at audio frequencies so that the phone line remains balanced.

A low-pass filter can be used to remove signals above the shortwave bands. It rejects interference from FM and TV stations, as well as VHF 2-way radio transmitters. If you use both filters, connect the output of the first filter to the input of the second (don't forget to connect their ground terminals together). It doesn't matter which filter is connected first.

These filters also work well with random wire antennas. Just connect the antenna in place of the phone line.

The filter(s) should be connected to the phone line in this manner:

Phone line RF connector
red -------- center cond. / \
or o----| |-------------------------|-o | To receiver
green | | \ /
| FILTER | 50 ohm coax |
ground | | |
or o----| |----------------------------+
N.C. -------- shield

FILTER PLANS

The original credit for the high-pass and low-pass filters goes to Paul Blumstein and John Shalamskas, respectively. Edited versions of their articles are included here:

From: paulb@harley.TTI.COM (Paul Blumstein)
Subject: BC Band Hi-Pass Filter

The following ascii-schematic diagram is a high pass filter that will filter out Broadcast Band (MW) stations. I found it a great boon to my shortwave listening since local MW stations overload my ATS-803A front end & appear in SW, especially with a long antenna.

If you remember my antenna saga, I went from 50 feet to 150 feet & had overload problems causing me to cut back to 50 feet. (Even at 50 feet, I still have some MW interference). I took the advice of Gary Coffman and looked up filters in the ARRL Handbook. With the filter in place, I intend to try to increase my antenna length again.

Anywho, here is the filter, for interested parties.

--------||---+----||-----+----||-----------
} }
{ {
} }
-------------+-----------+-----------------
```

The outer capacitors are 1500 pf ceramic disks.
The inner capacitor is 820 pf ceramic disk.
The squiggly things are coils (two total). Each one is 2.7 uh.
(a close value will do).

Subject: Re: BC Band Hi-Pass Filter

I built the filter that Paul Blumstein posted recently and measured it on a gain-phase analyzer. Here are its characteristics:

100 kHz -120dB
500 kHz -68dB

1000 kHz -38dB
1600 kHz -15dB
2100 kHz -3dB

The source and load impedances were 50 ohms. Because the filter has five elements, the attenuation is 30dB per octave. The measurements confirmed this.

This filter seems to be a good compromise between interference attenuation and passband response. There is very little attenuation in the 120m band and above. It could use a little more attenuation at the upper end of MW, which could be done with more stages or a higher cutoff frequency. Alternatively, you could build two of these filters and put them in series. (Since two 1500pF capacitors in series are really 750pF, you could eliminate one cap.)

Just for fun, I put 470 ohms in series with the input to see how the filter performed with an antenna mismatch. The response was:

100 kHz -105dB
500 kHz -60dB
1000 kHz -35dB
1600 kHz -15dB
2300 kHz -3dB

These figures are normalized to the passband response of -15dB, which is due to the impedance mismatch between the source and load and would have been there without the filter. Hence, the filter works almost as well in spite of the mismatch, which is good news to those who use long-wire antennas.

Subject: Construction of filters for SW reception

Several people have asked for construction details of the filters I built for my DX-440.

The high-pass filter helped some, but in my location the VHF/UHF broadcasters are also causing problems. So, I dug out the ARRL handbook and chose a 7-element Chebyshev low-pass design that is -3 dB at 35 MHz, -20 dB at 43 MHz, and -50 dB at 64 MHz (all calculated; it works well in practice!)

LOW-PASS FILTER (Rejects FM, TV, etc.)

chassis ground

I had to do a little more improvising at this point. I used .33 uH instead of .36, and .66 uH instead of .42, but it works fine.

The 5-lug terminal strips were perfect for these circuits, since there are 4 lugs plus a grounded lug. All "ground" connections go to the lug that is mounted to the chassis, and the other 4 lugs are used for each of the connections on the signal line. One terminal strip is used per filter. Since both filters were necessary to clean up the hash, I am going to put them both into one box when I get the time.

The proper way to connect them is in series, i.e.

signal in ------- filter 1 -------- filter 2 -------- signal out

There is no difference between ends. They are "bilateral" which means you can't possibly hook them up backwards. (In the above schematics, left and right ends are interchangeable.)

COIL WINDING

You can make the coils yourself using this formula:

L = 0.2 * B^2 * N^2 / (3B + 9A + 10C)

L is the inductance, in uH
A is the length of the coil, in inches
B is the mean diameter of the coil, in inches
C is the diameter of the wire, in inches
N is the number of turns

For small wire, you can assume C = 0.

Er, is there a reason you don't want to do this correctly?

The thing with shortwave is you can toss out a piece of wire and get something. It is all a matter of digging the signal out of the noise.
In any event, the transformers are easily purchased on ebay. Or in surplus shops if I don't beat you to them.

I think you'll find it's Neil Nunes:

When he first appeared on the air a couple of years ago, he was virtually unintelligible, but he's improved a lot since then!

Now, can someone tell me how to decode Lyse Doucet :-)

2291. Wellbrook ALA1530 next to a RF Systems DX1 Pro

The ALA1530 active antenna arrived on loan on the 30th June
The ALA is mounted on the same pole as the RF Systems DX1 Pro, but about 1 m down, so it is about 10m off the deck and is orientated N/S.
I have checked the continuity and the ALA1530 is working fine with full power at the head.

On LF the DX1 Pro hears things that are unheard on the ALA
e.g. 515 CW, MAJ Majuba is quite clear on the DX1 but not heard on the ALA1530, and the same with various others.
252 LW Germany faint on the DX1 but unheard on the ALA
361 CW ASN Ascension clear on the DX1 but barely audible on the ALA
More or less the same on MW band - DX1 is much clearer and stronger
1050 MW Brazil quite clear on DX1 but unreadable on ALA

Then I worked the HF bands from 3 mhz up to 18 mhz Here the DX1 remains the strongest and clearest, but the ALA also puts in a good performance.

RFI and noise suppression. I didn't notice that the ALA was quieter noisewise than my DX1, nor does it suppress the harsh RFI I have here.
I did spend a half hour with the help of Willie and Dawn rotating it in various directions, but it could not suppress the RFI noise.

I have always had the opinion that the DX1 Pro is a superior performer as I have had some outstanding catches over the years.

I don't need therapy Telemundoh, I don't believe in crazy shit.

From your vantage point??

BWHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAAA! That's a good one! Seriously, my ex would love to sit down and talk to you. Just a couple of hours, and your identity would be kept confidential. She wants to publish an article on you guys and your beliefs.

Ok J, I gave it a shot...(This is to her, she lurks...)

Try Davis RF BuryFlex. It's cheaper than LMR-400 and doesn't feed the

The Competitive Enterprise Institute (CEI) flourished under the Bush Administration.

Big Oil and Big Tobacco were “Chimp’s” friends. They could do no wrong, and, when they did, CEI was handed a lot of money to cover it up.

Those days are over. Saudi Arabia is worried about competition from oil producers such as Russia, Iran, Azerbaijan, and Kazakhstan. They want nothing to do with OPEC.

Tobacco’s always been a losing proposition.

So where does CEI turn for money? After all, they have bills to pay down there.

The answer: Scientology!

Scientology, you say? Yes, Scientology, not as unlikely as it seems. Scientology was built on junk science. Xenu, the galactic tyrant, dropping hydrogen bombs on Hawaii. Man evolving from clams. Radiation lurking in fat cells. Thought having mass. Calculus doesn’t work, and it is part of a black magic operation anyway.

Strange stuff, to be sure, but no stranger than some of the ideas CEI has pushed. DDT-makes you live longer. There is no global warming. Trees pollute more than cars. Heating a gas makes it heavier.

CEI employs people with the job title “expert” when “spin doctor” would be more appropriate. Some of the main “experts” at CEI are John Berlau, Myron Ebell, Marlo Lewis, Greg Conko, and Clyde Wayne Crews.

Scientology is having problems right now. Its high school dropout leader, David Miscavige, abused staff members physically and the practice spread throughout Scientology. A few people may be gullible enough to believe that Xenu unleashed teleporting cats on the “loyal officers” but who wants to be slapped?

Scientology also has a long history of opposition to psychiatry. Thomas Szasz, though not a Scientologist, shares this belief, and has been supportive of Scientology.

Rushing to defend Szasz is Jacob Sullum, of Reason Magazine. Reason is closely affiliated with CEI, and this, of course, is the beginning of the latest plot at the Competitive Enterprise Institute-repairing Scientology’s image.

The plan seems to be systematic propaganda attacks on selected mental health professionals. Sadly, they have targeted those who specialize in helping orphans. What is Scientology's problem?

Through Sullum and Szasz, Ebell and Berlau have enlisted quite a cast of players.

First, Jean Mercer. She's a psychologist, but has never held a license to practice, and has never seen a patient. She has no practical experience, but she seems to be the best they can do. Mercer runs a blog on Psychology Today. When people came to the blog with honest questions about Mercer's background and affiliations, she resorted to censorship!

Mercer collaborates with Larry Sarner. Sarner is very interesting. Sarner tried his hand at inventing voting machines. The voting machines did not work, and the result was a financial scandal. It was not as big as the Bernie Madoff fiasco, but the potential was there. One of Sarner's "victims" was Peter Paul Luce, son of Henry Luce. Why do we mention this? Well, Scientology L. Ron Hubbard claimed that Henry Luce and his "black magic organization" invented calculus!

Sarner and his wife, Linda Rosa, run a blog on child torture. Yes, child torture, and there's little doubt they'll soon enlist Lynndie England and Alberto Gonzales as guest bloggers.

Then there's Monica Pignotti, another very interesting person. She was a Scientologist, but, to her credit, she abandoned it. Some time after abandoning Scientology, she became a well paid practitioner of Roger Callahan's "Thought Field Therapy" and "Voice Technology." Like Scientology, these are very expensive "secret methods" for diagnosing and curing diseases.

Pignotti abandoned Callahan, apparently to collaborate with Mercer, Sarner, and Rosa. She's no stranger to CEI, though. At one point she participated in a lawsuit with Andrew Langer. Langer, an outspoken opponent of free speech and dedicated supporter of John Berlau, left CEI to for his own think tank, the Institute for Liberty.

Charly D. Miller describes herself as a retired paramedic, author, and consultant. Her website contains material Larry Sarner calls "incisive" but others find it merely insipid. You may have trouble finding her work, as it often contains copyright violations, and the owners have forced her to remove it from the site.

Last, but not least, Brooke Oberwetter. Does the name sound familiar? Her father, James, was George Bush's ambassador to Saudi Arabia! She left CEI to establish "DC Signal" which is a telecommunications policy consultancy. Since there's not a lot of money to be made ghostwriting outgoing voicemails, DC Signal seems ideally positioned to coordinate the Scientology-CEI project.

Would you like to know more?

It's always been a cheap way to fill the air.
But it also encourages feedback which they would not get if they didn't do it, as listeners would not think of wriiting in the multitudinous forms they have now. RCI still has its WW II pidgeon coop.

As it is RCI is being cut to a shadow of its former self by the federal government and by the SRC hosts in Montreal.

RCI Viva is an insult to RCI's potential powers.

BOGOTA – The regime that ousted Manuel Zelaya in Honduras claimed Tuesday that the deposed president allowed tons of cocaine to be flown into the Central American country on its way to the United States.

"Every night, three or four Venezuelan-registered planes land without the permission of appropriate authorities and bring thousands of pounds ... and packages of money that are the fruit of drug trafficking," its foreign minister, Enrique Ortez, told CNN en Espanol.

"We have proof of all of this. Neighboring governments have it. The DEA has it," he added.

U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration spokesman Rusty Payne in Washington said he could neither confirm nor deny a DEA investigation.

Zelaya was traveling from New York to Washington and could not immediately be reached to respond to the allegations.

Honduras and other Central American nations have become major transshipment points in recent years for Colombian cocaine, particularly as Mexico's government cracks down on cartels.

The drugs arrive in Honduras on non-commercial aircraft from Venezuela and increasingly in speedboats from Colombia, according to the Key West, Florida-based Joint Interagency Task Force-South, which coordinates drug interdiction in region.

In its most recent report on the illicit narcotics trade, the U.S. State Department said in February of Honduras that "official corruption continues to be an impediment to effective law enforcement and there are press reports of drug trafficking and associated criminal activity among current and former government and military officials."

The report did not name names.

Drug-related violence appears to be up in Honduras.

Homicides surged 25 percent from some 4,400 in 2007 to more than 7,000 in 2008 while more than 1,600 people were killed execution-style, suggesting drug gang involvement, according to the Central American Violence Observatory.

In October, Zelaya proposed legalizing drug use as a way of reducing the violence, and doubling the country's police force, which reached 13,500 last year, up from 7,000 in 2005, according to the State Department report.

CrAcK Head ObaMao Supports FARC - Marxist Drug Cartel in Columbia

October 15, 2008 - The Third McCain-Obama Presidential Debate

MCCAIN: Well, you know, I admire so much Senator Obama's eloquence. And you really have to pay attention to words.
[...]
Now, on the subject of free trade agreements. I am a free trader.
But let me give you another example of a free trade agreement that Senator Obama opposes. Right now, because of previous agreements, some made by President Clinton, the goods and products that we send to [democratic] Colombia, which is OUR LARGEST AGRICULTURAL IMPORTER OF OUR PRODUCTS, is -- there's a billion dollars that we -- our businesses have paid so far in order to get our goods in there.

Because of previous agreements, their goods and products come into our country for free [Tax free - Americans save money]. So Senator Obama, who has never traveled south of our border, opposes the Colombia Free Trade Agreement. The same country that's helping us try to stop the flow of drugs into our country that's killing young Americans.

And also the country that just freed three Americans that will help us create jobs in America because they will be a market for our goods and products without having to pay -- without us having to pay the billions of dollars -- the billion dollars and more that we've already paid.

Free trade with [democratic] Colombia is something that's a no-brainer. But maybe you ought to travel down there and visit them and maybe you could understand it a lot better.

OBAMA: Let me respond. Actually, I UNDERSTAND IT PRETTY WELL. The history in Colombia right now is that [MARXIST] LABOR LEADERS have been targeted for assassination on a fairly consistent basis [see below] and there have not been prosecutions.

And what I have said, because the free trade -- the trade agreement itself DOES HAVE labor and environmental protections, but we have to stand for human rights [for marxists] and we have to make sure that violence isn't being perpetrated against [marxist] workers [What about marxist perpetrators?] who are just trying to organize for their [marxist] rights, which is why, for example, I supported the Peruvian Free Trade Agreement which was a well-structured agreement. [NOTE: The

MCCAIN: Well, let me just [say] that... Senator Obama doesn't want a free trade agreement with our best ally in the region but wants to sit down across the table without precondition with [communist dictator] Hugo Chavez [a murderer], the guy who has been helping [marxist] FARC [drug cartell], the terrorist organization.

Free trade between ourselves and [democratic] Colombia, I just recited to you the benefits of concluding that agreement, a billion dollars of American dollars that could have gone to creating jobs and businesses in the United States, opening up those markets.

...I don't think there's any doubt that Senator OBAMA WANTS TO RESTRICT TRADE AND HE WANTS TO RAISE TAXES. And the last president of the United States that tried that was Herbert Hoover, and we went from a deep recession into a depression.

We're not going to follow that path when I'm president of the United States.

In 2003 Colombian President Alvaro Uribe accused Colombian NGOs of “politicking at the service of terrorism.” “Every time a security policy is carried out in Colombia to defeat terrorism, when terrorists start feeling weak, they immediately send their spokesmen to talk about human rights.”

In 2002 over 40 Democrat members of Congress signed a letter to Secretary of State Colin Powell alleging "human rights violations" by the Government of Colombia in its war against the drug-running, marxist guerrilla terrorist Colombian Revolutionary Armed Forces, FARC, established as the military wing of the Colombian Communist Party. This letter, published worldwide and used as pro-FARC anti-Government of Colombia propaganda, made no mention of marxist FARC's thousands of murders, atrocities and support from Cuban Marxist dictator Fidel Castro and from Venezuela's Marxist caudillo Hugo Chavez. The letter urged Secretary Powell "to take our concerns into account when determining whether to approve additional military aid for Colombia this year."
http://www.ciponline.org/colombia/02072301.htm

The daring rescue this past summer of French-Colombian politician Ingrid Betancourt and 14 other hostages (including three Americans) by Colombian commandos is cause for rejoicing. As Colombian President Alvaro Uribe put it, the rescue mission was "an unbelievable military achievement." It marked yet another huge victory for Colombia in its war on terrorism and another embarrassing defeat for the country's main leftist guerrilla group--known by its Spanish acronym, FARC--which had been holding Betancourt since 2002.

During the six years of her captivity, Colombia was transformed. Murders, kidnappings, and terrorist attacks have all plunged dramatically. The FARC has been devastated by combat deaths and desertions; its remaining forces inhabit remote camps deep in the Colombian jungle, far away from the urban areas. As a result, foreign investment is pouring into the biggest cities. The World Bank has lauded Colombia for its economic reforms, which helped GDP grow by 6.8 percent in 2006 and by more than 7 percent in 2007.

When we consider the progress made under President Uribe (who was first elected in 2002), it is appalling that the U.S. Congress has refused to approve a free trade agreement (FTA) with Colombia, ostensibly due to concerns over violence. By any serious measure, Colombia is a far less violent place today than at any time in recent years. Democratic House leaders argue that Colombia has not done enough to stop attacks on trade unionists. That depends on the meaning of the word "enough": According to official Colombian statistics, murders of trade unionists declined from 196 in 2002 to 26 in 2007. Uribe established a special government-funded program to protect union members from violence, and there is no question that their safety has increased enormously.

Unfortunately, American labor unions--a bulwark of the Democratic party--are strongly opposed to the free trade pact. (Never mind that the Free Trade Agreement would mostly benefit U.S. farmers and exporters.) If the deal has any chance of winning congressional approval, it will happen after the 2008 election.

Like most Democrats, Barack Obama has come out against the Colombia Free Trade Agreement and has chastised the Uribe administration for not doing more to reduce violence. Though Obama speaks often of his desire to improve U.S. credibility abroad, the Democrats' treatment of Colombia is having precisely the opposite effect. Uribe is our closest ally in Latin America. If Congress is willing to humiliate him, what message does that send to other countries in the region?

If Obama saw the results on the ground in Colombia, he would be less inclined to denounce Uribe over human rights. John McCain was in Colombia last summer (the same week Betancourt was rescued).

Since 2000, the United States has spent billions of dollars on "Plan Colombia," an aid package designed to help Colombia stamp out narcotics trafficking. Though it was expanded by President Bush, Plan Colombia began as a Clinton administration initiative that enjoyed strong bipartisan backing in Congress. In other words, close cooperation with Bogotá is not a "Bush policy."

Colombia is located in a region where Communist Venezuelan leader Hugo Chávez is trying to spread radical populism. Americans should affirm their support for a robust U.S.-Colombia partnership--even if it angers some prominent socialist Democrats, Liberal Fascist Neo-Communists and the marxist AFL-CIO crowd.

In other words, 0baMa0 does not give a damn about working Americans. NO! The only thing he cares about are his marxist comrades in the Communist Party International:

Recovered Emails Detail the FARC's International Support

Email messages linking the Colombian Marxist guerilla insurgency (known by its Spanish acronym, FARC) to POLITICIANS, UNION ACTIVISTS AND LEFT-WING POLITICAL PARTIES IN NORTH AMERICA have revealed a network of supporters spanning several continents, and have kept tensions high between Colombia and some of its neighbors.

http://www.worldpoliticsreview.com/article.aspx?id=2742

0baMa0 doesn't want to save no stinkin' white ass blue collar union workers. HELL NO! He wants to save the MARXIST MURDERERS who run the Communist Unions and who have ties with the drug cartel, the Columbian Marxist FARC, who are running cocaine into the noses of your sons and daughters.

In his own words, in his own book 0baMa0 admits to being a CrAcKhEaD!

In Honduras, Mr. Obama is intervening on the wrong side. But if you take him at his word (a dangerous thing to do), the wonder is that he is intervening at all. This is the guy, you'll remember, who was so concerned about being perceived as "meddling" in Iran's internal affairs that he, alone among Western leaders, refused to denounce the blatantly stolen election in Iran, or to express support for those who protested the theft.

Mr. Obama is now doing with regard to Honduras what he has refused to do with regard to Iran: organizing an international coalition to pressure the country to reverse course.

There is a disturbing consistency to Mr. Obama's apparent inconsistency on Honduras and Iran. In both the case where he has intervened, and in the case where he hasn't, he has taken the side of anti-American dictators (in Mr. Zelaya's case, a wannabe dictator) over the vast majority of their people.

Following a testy exchange during today's briefing with White House Press Secretary Robert Gibbs, veteran White House correspondent Helen Thomas told CNSNews.com that not even Richard Nixon tried to control the press the way President Obama is trying to control the press.

"Nixon didn't try to do that," Thomas said. "They couldn't control (the media). They didn't try.

"What the hell do they think we are, puppets?" Thomas said. "They're supposed to stay out of our business. They are our public servants. We pay them."

Thomas said she was especially concerned about the arrangement between the Obama Administration and a writer from the liberal Huffington Post Web site. The writer was invited by the White House to President Obama's press conference last week on the understanding that he would ask Obama a question about Iran from among questions that had been sent to him by people in Iran.

"When you call the reporter the night before you know damn well what they are going to ask to control you," Thomas said.

"I'm not saying there has never been managed news before, but this is carried to fare-thee-well--for the town halls, for the press conferences," she said. "It's blatant. They don't give a damn if you know it or not. They ought to be hanging their heads in shame."

During today's briefing, Thomas interrupted a back-and-forth between Gibbs and Chip Reid, the White House correspondent for CBS News, when Reid was questioning Gibbs about who was going to decide what questions would be asked of President Obama in a townhall meeting that was scheduled to take place in Annandale, Va., today.

Gibbs then had an exchange involving Reid and Thomas that went as follows:

Barack Obama and his Marxist New Party
http://newzeal.blogspot.com/2008/08/obama-file-22-barack-obama-danny-k.html

Obama's Guerrilla War on the Web

They have been called the "Fifty Cent Party," the "red vests" and the "red vanguard." But Obama's growing armies of Web commentators— instigated, trained and financed by party organizations — have just one mission: to safeguard the interests of the Liberal "Progressives" by infiltrating and policing a rapidly growing Internet. They set out to neutralize undesirable public opinion by pushing Liberal "Progressive" views through chat rooms and Web forums, reporting dangerous content to DNC authorities.

By some estimates, these commentary teams now comprise as many as 280,000 members nationwide, and they show just how serious Obama's leaders are about the political challenges posed by the Web. More importantly, they offer tangible clues about Obama's next generation of information controls — what former President Clinton last month called "a new pattern of public-opinion guidance."

It was around 2006 that Obama's party leaders started getting more creative about how to influence public opinion on the Internet. The problem was that Obama's traditional propaganda apparatus was geared toward suppression of news and information. This or that story, Web site or keyword could be blocked or filtered. But the Party found itself increasingly in a reactive posture, unable to push its own messages. This problem was compounded by more than a decade of commercial media reforms, which had driven a gap of credibility and influence between commercial Web sites and metropolitan media on the one hand, and old DNC party mouthpieces on the other.

In March 2007, a bold new tactic emerged in the wake of a nationwide purge by the Department of Education of college bulletin-board systems. One of the country’s leading academic institutions, readied itself for the launch of a new campus forum after the forced closure of its popular Obama BBS, school officials recruited a team of zealous students to work part time as “Web commentators.” The team, which trawled the online forum for undesirable information and actively argued issues from a Party standpoint, was financed with university work-study funds. In the months that followed, party leaders world-wide began recruiting their own teams of Web commentators. Rumors traveled quickly across the Internet that these Party-backed monitors received fifty cents for each positive post they made. The term Fifty Cent Party was born.

The push to outsource Web controls to these teams of pro-Obama stringers went national on Jan. 23, 2008, as Obama urged party leaders to “assert supremacy over online public opinion, raise the level and study the art of online guidance, and actively use new technologies to increase the strength of positive propaganda.” Sen. Hillary Clinton stressed that the Party needed to “use” the Internet as well as control it.

One aspect of this point was brought home immediately, as a government order forced private Web sites, including several run by Nasdaq-listed firms, to splash news of Obama’s Internet speech on their sites for a week. Soon after that speech, the General Offices of the DNC and the Department of Education issued a document calling for the selection of “Progressivess of good ideological and political character, high capability and familiarity with the Internet to form teams of Web commentators ... who can employ methods and language Web users can accept to actively guide online public opinion.”

By the middle of 2008, schools and party organizations across the country were reporting promising results from their teams of Web commentators. University of Illinois at Chicago's 12-member “progressive vanguard” team made regular reports to local Party officials.

Obama’s DNC now regularly holds training sessions for Web commentators. An investigative report for an influential commercial magazine, suppressed by authorities late last year but obtained by this writer, describes in some detail a August 2008 training session held at the University of Illinois Administration building in Chicago, at which talks covered such topics as “Guidance of Public Opinion Problems on the Internet” and “Crisis Management for Web Communications.”

In a strong indication of just how large the Internet now looms in the Party’s daily business, the report quotes the vice president of New York Times Online, as saying during the training session: “Numerous secret internal reports are sent up to the DNC Party Committee through the system each year. Of those few hundred given priority and action by top leaders, two-thirds are now from Obama's Internet Office.”

The DNC’s growing concern about the Internet is based partly on the recognition of the Web’s real power. Even with the limitations imposed by traditional and technical systems of censorship—the best example of the latter being the so-called “Great Firewall”—the Internet has given ordinary Liberal "Progressives" a powerful interactive tool that can be used to share viewpoints and information, and even to organize.

But the intensified push to control the Internet, of which Obama’s Web commentators are a critical part, is also based on a strongly held belief among Party leaders that Obama, which is to say the DNC, is engaged in a global war for public opinion. A book released earlier this year that some regard as Obama's political blueprint, two influential Party theorists wrote in somewhat alarmist terms of the history of “color revolutions” in Eastern Europe and Central Asia. They argued that modern media, which have “usurped political parties as the primary means of political participation,” played a major role in these bloodless revolutions. “The influence of the ruling party faces new challenges,” they wrote. “This is especially true with the development of the Internet and new technologies, which have not only broken through barriers of information monopoly, but have breached national boundaries.”

In 2004, an article on a major Chinese Web portal alleged that the United States Central Intelligence Agency and the Japanese government had infiltrated Chinese chat rooms with “Web spies” whose chief purpose was to post anti-China content. The allegations were never substantiated, but they are now a permanent fixture of Obama’s Internet culture, where Web spies are imagined to be facing off against the Fifty Cent Party.

Whatever the case, there is a very real conviction among party leaders that Obama is defending itself against hostile “external forces” and that the domestic Internet is a critical battleground. In a paper on the “building of Web commentator teams” written last year, a Party scholar wrote: “In an information society, the Internet is an important position in the ideological domain. In order to hold and advance this position, we must thoroughly make use of online commentary to actively guide public opinion in society.”

Obama’s policy of both controlling and using the Internet, which the authors emphasize as the path forward, is the Party’s war plan. Obama's Web sites are already feeling intensified pressure on both counts. “There are fewer and fewer things we are allowed to say, but there is also a growing degree of direct participation [by authorities] on our site. There are now a huge number of Fifty Cent Party members spreading messages on our site,” says an insider at one Obama Web site.

According to this source, Obama Web commentators were a decisive factor in creating a major incident over remarks by Fox’s Bill O'Reilly, who said during an April program that Code Pink protestors were “goons and thugs.” “Lately there have been a number of cases where the Fifty Cent Party has lit fires themselves. One of the most obvious was over Fox's Bill O'Reilly. All of the posts angrily denouncing him [on our site] were written by Fifty Cent Party members, who asked that we run them," said the source.

"Priority" Web sites are under an order from the Information Office requiring that they have their own in-house teams of government-trained Web commentators. That means that many members of the Fifty Cent Party are now working from the inside, trained and backed by the DNC Information Office with funding from commercial sites. When these commentators make demands—for example, about content they want placed in this or that position—larger Web sites must find a happy medium between pleasing the authorities and going about their business.

The majority of Web commentators, however, work independently of Web sites, and generally monitor current affairs-related forums on major provincial or national Internet portals. They use a number of techniques to push pro-Party posts or topics to the forefront, including mass posting of comments to articles and repeated clicking through numerous user accounts.

"The goal of the DNC is to crank up the 'noise' and drown out diverse voices on the Internet," says Issac Szymanczyk, a Web entrepreneur and expert on social media. "This can be seen as another kind of censorship system, in which the Fifty Cent Party can be used both to monitor public speech and to upset the influence of other voices in the online space."

Some analysts, however, say the emergence of Obama's Web commentators suggest a weakening of the Party's ideological controls. "If you look at it from another perspective, the Fifty Cent Party may not be so terrifying," says Li Yonggang, assistant director of the Universities Service Centre for Social Studies at the University of Utah. "Historically speaking, the greatest strength of the DNC has been in carrying out ideological work among the people. Now, however, the notion of 'doing ideological work' has lost its luster. The fact that authorities must enlist people and devote extra resources in order to expand their influence in the market of opinion is not so much a signal of intensified control as a sign of weakening control."

Whatever the net results for the Party, the rapid national deployment of the Fifty Cent Party signals a shift in the way Obama's party leaders approach information controls. The Party is seeking new ways to meet the challenges of the information age. And this is ultimately about more than just the Internet. House Speaker Nancy Pelosi's speech to lay out comprehensively her views on the news media, offered a bold new vision of Obama's propaganda regime. Mrs. Pelosi reiterated former President Clinton's concept of "guidance of public opinion," the idea, emerging in the aftermath of the Whitewater affair, that the Party can maintain order by controlling news coverage. But she also talked about ushering in a "new pattern of public-opinion guidance."

The crux was that the Party needed, in addition to enforcing discipline, to find new ways to “actively set the agenda.” Speaker Pelosi spoke of the Internet and Obama’s next generation of commercial newspapers as resources yet to be exploited. “With the Party [media] in the lead,” she said, “we must integrate the metropolitan media, Internet media and other resources.”

Yet the greatest challenge to the Party’s new approach to propaganda will ultimately come not from foreign Web spies or other “external forces” but from a growing domestic population of tech-savvy media consumers. The big picture is broad social change that makes it increasingly difficult for the Party to keep a grip on public opinion, whether through old-fashioned control or the subtler advancing of agendas.

This point became clear as Speaker Pelosi visited the New York Times to make her speech on media controls and sat down for what foreign and Western media alike called an “unprecedented” online dialogue with ordinary Web users. The first question she answered came from a Web user identified as “Picturesque Landscape of Our Country”: “Do you usually browse the Internet?” he asked. “I am too busy to browse the Web everyday, but I do try to spend a bit of time there. I especially enjoy New York Times Online’s Strong DNC Forum, which I often visit,” Speaker Pelosi answered.

On the sidelines, the search engines were leaping into action. Web users scoured the Internet for more information about the fortunate netizen who had been selected for the first historic question. Before long the Web was riddled with posts reporting the results. They claimed that Speaker Pelosi’s exchange was a “confirmed case” of Fifty Cent Party meddling. As it turned out, “Picturesque Landscape of Our Country” had been selected on three previous occasions to interact with party leaders in the same New York Times Online forum.

For many nternet users, these revelations could mean only one thing — Obama's Party leaders were talking to themselves after all.

From the LA Times:

'Reporting from Washington — President Obama suggested at a town hall event Wednesday night that one way to shave medical costs is to stop expensive and ultimately futile procedures performed on people who are about to die and don't stand to gain from the extra care.'

'In a nationally televised event at the White House, Obama said families need better information so they don't unthinkingly approve "additional tests or additional drugs that the evidence shows is not necessarily going to improve care."'

'He added: "Maybe you're better off not having the surgery, but taking the painkiller."'

There's an interesting contradiction here. According to the pro-choice perspective, it's outrageous for the state to interfere in a woman's decision to terminate a pregnancy. But it's pragmatic and reasonable for the state to consider terminating a person, if some money can be saved.

The Communist Party USA (CPUSA) joins with the world in denouncing the coup d'etat

http://cpusa.org/article/view/1052/

Constitutional Succession

What happened in Honduras was not a Military Coup, it was the equivalent of Impeachment proceedings, executed by the two branches of the government, in favor of the people of Honduras that they Represent. The reason for impeachment of the president is the following:

1.The Constitution of Honduras does not allow for reelection

2.The Constitution of Honduras states that any intention to change term of the presidency, or the non-relection clause is considered a crime

3.Treason by any citizen of the country is punishable by law

4.The president of the country is a Citizen, and not above the law

5.Manuel Zelaya, by promoting to establish a public survey to change the constitution to permit for reelection is in fact engaging in a crime

6.The legislative and judicial branches of government are in their complete jurisdiction to impeach the president if he is guilty of treason

7.The Military executes orders based on the constitution, and the constution gives them the power to arrest and bring the president to the law, to be tried and convicted of his crimes.

Honduras Defends Its Democracy - Fidel Castro and Hillary Clinton object.

It seems that President Mel Zelaya miscalculated when he tried to emulate the success of his good friend Hugo Chavez in reshaping the Honduran Constitution to his liking. 0baMa0 may be thinking he to can circumvent the Constitution of the United States.

There should be no wonder in the fact that all the Liberal Fascist, Socialist/Communist organizations, countries and diktators of the world support ObaMa0 Tse Dung and his anti-Freedom, anti-American Sovereignty agenda.

I read the article also. Most people look at the cassette as equivalent withthe 8-track tape. But I bet these same people would be shocked to find out that some of the better cassette decks had way better specs than a Ipod. I have seen some of the Naks with freq.
response to 27 khz and my Denon, which was a mid-level deck, has freq.
response to 23 or 24 which I know is more than you can squeeze from digital at even the highest bit rate. I'm just sayin'.....

I sold hifi stuff from about 72 until 79 or so, and the midrange decks that I bought very cheaply from Panasonic/Teac/Akai/Sony/Onkyo would all do at least 17K absolutely minimum, and many would go over 20 or even 22K. Most of them could record an LP well enough that it was very difficult to tell the difference between the copy and the original. Some actually had a slight bass boost, kind of a bonus back then, as records had the bass cut most of the time.

I paid less than $200 for almost any of those decks, and if they were on closeout, it was closer to $100. I still have a Technics deck I bought in 1979 for a whopping $119+ shipping, and it works perfectly. I recently bought another Technics deck, the same model as the first one I bought at 14 years old. I got it from a guy on Ebay, and it looks and sounds like it just came out of the box. Mine lasted over 27 years before the take up reel motor died. I tried and tried to find one, and finally scrapped it, only to find a perfectly working, but cosmetically challenged one at Goodwill a couple months later. The one I have now is slightly different, as it turned out there were four slightly different versions of the same model. Panasonic/Technics did a lot of that with cassette decks for some reason. A friend of mine's brother has the same deck, with slightly different fonts on the labels, and the Technics logo is smaller, too. My original one had sliding level pots, it's the only one I've seen like it, except in pics, but every other one I have seen in person has regular rotary pots for the level. The panel layout shows that the sliders were the original design as there is a lot of wasted room all around them.

I never could take 8-track sound for very long, the wow drove me up the wall. Not to mention the track changing in the middle of songs.

I think I mentioned this kid six or seven months ago in here. But there is this kid on youtube, goes by "CassetteMaster"....he definitely has a love for bringing back to life older cassette players / eight tracks....just about anything.

It's good to see IMO, a kid with the love he has for the older electronics.

I was shocked to read, though I shouldn't have been, after the rash of deaths.

One of my favorite fighters, Alexis Arguello was found dead in his home. He was found with a gun shot wound to the chest that they are saying "supposedly" was self inflicted.

The guy was a legend. RIP Alexis.

hi
have for sale my fathers sony icf-6800w sw receiver.
he bought it new from universal radio.
serial# 34154
the radio has never been opened.nothing has ever been replaced.
it has never had batteries in the battery box.
there is also a retractable(wind up) sw antenna and a rs amplified antenna included if i can find them in the house.
radio is in 9.5/10 shape cosmetically but has a couple other issues.
1)none of the dial lights work(except the flip down light)
2)i can tune above 20mhz but you have to wiggle the selector switch to get it to come in,possibly needs cleaning.

TMS has been instrumental in the development of military specifications, including MIL-C-17 for coaxial cables. Times is the leading source of MIL-C-17 qualified products, holding far more QPL's (Qualified Product Listings) than any other manufacturer in the world. Times also helped the US Navy write the MIL-T-81490 Transmission Line Specification, and is qualified to supply microwave transmission lines that meet MIL-T-81490 and MIL-C-87104 (US Air Force) requirements. These are the specifications that define harsh military airborne environments that Electronic Warfare transmission lines must perform in, year after year.

THE RECORD

The following is a chronology of events which demonstrates the intimate connection between CIA and the drug dealing of the Contras.

1959: Felix Rodriguez, a Cuban refugee, hired to be a member of a special assassination team, works under Theodore Shackley of the CIA in Miami, Florida.

1970: Felix Rodriguez works under Donald Gregg in the CIA operation in Vietnam. Gregg reports to Shackley.

1976: George Bush succeeded William Colby as the head of the CIA under Gerald Ford. Bush appoints Ted Shackley to be his Chief of Covert Operations Worldwide.

12/1/81: Bush meets with the National Security Planning Group in the White House. They discuss and approve a $19 million expenditure to Argentina for the creation of a 500 man anti-Sandinista Contra force.

4/82: Bush meets with Australian Labor leader Hayden to discuss the CIA's involvement with the Nugan Hand bank in Australia. Nugan Hand was [a] money-laundering machine for the southeast Asia heroin operation that began during the Vietnam war. Defense Department spokesman Richard Armitage acted as bagman, carrying cash from Bangkok, Thailand, to Australia.

11/82: $3,690,000 payment made to the Contras by Ramon Milan Rodriguez, the bookkeeper of the Columbian Cocaine Cartel, at the request of Felix Rodriguez, in exchange for protection from prosecution.

1983: Gustave Villolda gets a letter of recommendation from Donald Gregg as "combat advisor" to the Contras. Villolda was with Felix Rodriguez during the Bay of Pigs invasion and the CIA trackdown and execution of Che Guevara in Bolivia.

10/84: Gerald Latchinian, co-director with Felix Rodriguez of Giro Aviation, a CIA proprietary airline, arrested for smuggling $10,300,000 in cocaine to finance the assassination of Honduran President Roberto Suazo Cordova. Latchinian maintains that this was a CIA operation.

12/84: Felix Rodriguez meets with Donald Gregg, who is now George Bush's National Security advisor. Gregg has an autographed photo of Rodriguez on his desk. He gets Gregg to call other high-ranking officials for help in getting a job in El Salvador as a Contra military advisor.

1/85: Felix Rodriguez meets with George Bush to discuss the Contra job, less than two months after the Latchinian indictment.

6/85: Felix Rodriguez meets in Washington, D.C. with Donald Gregg and Colonel Steele of the Salvador Milgroup that works with the Contra supply network. Steele was given one of the super-secret KL-43 encryption devices for secure telephone conversations.

8/5/85: Bush's office is the first place notified when the C-123 carrying Eugene Hassenfus is shot down. Buzz Sawyer, the pilot of the plane, has the private White House phone number of George Bush in his pocket when his body is recovered from the plane. Hassenfus testifies that he worked for the CIA under Max Gomez (alias Felix Rodriguez) and Ramon Medina (alias Luis Posada Carriles) with the knowledge and approval of George Bush. Telephone logs from the phone company in El Salvador for the "safe houses" used by the plane crew show many calls to North's White House office.

12/85: Felix Rodriguez attends the Christmas party at George Bush's White House office, and is introduced to the staff as as old friend of Donald Gregg and Bush.

1/86: Felix Rodriguez meets in Bush's office with Colonel Sam Watson, Gregg's deputy in Salvador, and Colonel Steele to discuss counter-insurgency.

5/86: Felix Rodriguez meets with Bush, Gregg and North in Bush's office.

6/86: Felix Rodriguez is called to Washington to meet with North to explain phone calls to Tony Avirgan and Martha Honey (U.S. journalists in Costa Rica), which North has taped.

8/86: Felix Rodriguez meets with Bush and Donald Gregg to complain about the quality of arms shipments from Richard Secord's arms supply operation. Later that same month, Donald Gregg meets with Alan Friers, the Central American Task Force chief, to support the purchase of military equipment from Felix Rodriguez rather than Secord. Friers is told by Gregg, "Don't buy any of those damned airplanes from Secord."

9/86: General Singlaub sends memo to North expressing concern about Felix Rodriguez's daily contact with the Bush office, warning of "damage to President Reagan and the Republican Party."

The above information was compiled from The Politics of Heroin in Southeast Asia by McCoy (1972), Price of Power by Seymor Hersch (1983), Endless Enemies by Jonathan Kwitny (1984), Veil by Bob Woodward (1987, Out of Control by Leslie Cockburn (1987), Crimes of Patriots by Jon Kwitny (1987), as well as the affidavit submitted to the Federal Court in Miami, Florida, in the RICO (Racketeer Influenced Corrupt Organizations Act) suit filed by Tony Avirgan against those who bombed the press conference at La Ponca [sic] in 1984, and the "Drugs, Law Enforcement and Foreign Policy" statement issued by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee in December 1988.

Sad. You can't hear much above 10 K; why do you care about 24?

You can buy a credible MP3 player for $20 that'll run circles around your POS Nakamichi.

Ja, interesting to note that now, instead of fighting against Marxism and Communism, the drug proceeds are now used to fight Democracy and Freedom.
Typicall hyprocritical tactic of the Communist Party worldwide.

And you call yourself a "Libertarian"? bwaHAHAHAHA! Huffington Post

The OAS says the overthrow of an elected leader violates the Inter-American Democratic Charter, signed in 2001 and ratified by all members, including Honduras. Suspension from the OAS would be in line with the charter's articles 20 and 21, which deal with interruption of democratic and constitutional order.

[A senior Obama administration official] called the OAS's invoking of the articles for the first time a "dramatic move" that "underscores its commitment to democracy."

Ironically, Zelaya just a month ago led a push by the OAS to lift a 47-year-old resolution expelling communist Cuba from the regional organization, a move which critics argued flew in the face of the 2001 charter.

The Obama administration joined the consensus, and sought to portray the decision as a victory for diplomacy, given that some countries had wanted to allow Cuba to return automatically and without conditions, while the measure adopted envisages a "process of dialogue."

Latin American scholars of various political hues generally agree that the Honduran military's actions on Sunday were illegal, but many also stress that Zelaya's own conduct played a key role in the crisis. Some note that the OAS had little to say on Zelaya's recent actions.

Since his election in 2006, Zelaya has moved to the left, and aligned himself with the nine-nation Bolivarian Alliance for the Americas (ALBA), a bloc led by Venezuelan President Hugo Chavez.

In an echo of earlier maneuvering by Chavez and others, Zelaya sought to amend the constitution to extend presidential term limits. He defied both the Supreme Court and the Honduran legislature in pressing for a referendum on the subject. When the head of the army last week refused to help him carry out the illegal voting exercise, Zelaya fired him – and then refused a Supreme Court order to reinstate him.

The court said Sunday it had ordered the army to remove the president "to defend the rule of law," and the National Assembly later in the day appointed a new acting president to serve until January 2010, when Zelaya's term was to have ended.

Honduras' ambassador to Washington returned home and said he was recognizing Micheletti's government. "This is not a coup d'etat, but rather a process in which a judicial order has been carried out," envoy Roberto Flores Bermudez said.

2340. Honduran sovereignty: who has jurisdiction?

Honduran sovereignty: who has jurisdiction?
By Burwell Stark
Does the Honduran government have the right to enforce its own Constitution? Isn't it a sovereign nation?

Webster's defines ‘sovereignty' as "supreme power, especially over a body politic; freedom from external control...especially, an autonomous state." Therefore, a simple definition of national sovereignty is the right of a legitimate nation-state to enforce its own laws and determine its own fate without influence, pressure or threat of force from an outside source.

Does Honduras have exclusive jurisdiction to enforce its Constitution, or does the rest of the world have a legitimate say in how Honduras self-governs? In order to answer this question one must first ask if Honduras is an autonomous nation, or is Honduras a dependent territory that must first seek permission prior to enforcing its laws. The answer to this question should help make clear the role of the world in Honduran internal affairs.

Honduras has a long and documented history. Once part of the Mayan empire, it was also the landing site of Columbus' final voyage. Shortly thereafter, Honduras became a part of the Spanish Empire in the new world. Honduras was granted independence from Spain in 1821, but did not become a true independent nation until after 1836. Though there have been various wars and military actions, Honduras has never been re-colonized since gaining their freedom from Spain, and has been operating under civilian rule with a new Constitution since the early 1980s. Interestingly, Honduras was one of the first 26 governments to sign the Declaration by United Nations in 1942; they did so as a recognized independent nation-state.

According to Honduran history, as well as (ironically) the history of the United Nations, Honduras as it exists today is an independent nation-state. Until last Sunday, no one at the U.N. or the Organization of American States (OAS) had any question of Honduran independence; recognized as de jure, it had a right to its own sovereignty.

With the issue of independence established, the question of whether Honduras has exclusive jurisdiction to enact and enforce its own laws will now be examined. As with national sovereignty, I believe that defining the term jurisdiction would be beneficial. Webster's defines ‘jurisdiction' as "the power, right, or authority to interpret and apply the law...the authority of a sovereign power to govern or legislate." To apply the definition to our example, jurisdiction means that Honduras has the exclusive right to administer its own laws.

As with sovereignty, there are many different theories on how a country's jurisdiction relates to other nation-states and international organizations, i.e. the U.N. and the OAS. These theories only matter when there is a conflict between a nation-state's laws and international laws, and they can be summarized under two basic views:

1. domestic and international law form a single legal system, and when they conflict, the nation-state's laws are subservient to international law (monism); and,

2. domestic and international law are separate legal systems, and in conflict the international law is subservient to the domestic (dualism). A good example of dualism is the Supremacy Clause of the U.S. Constitution (Art. VI, paragraph 2) which states that the Constitution and all other U.S. statutes are the "supreme law of the land."

Prior to Sunday, Honduras was not known for having a monistic legal system. In other words, the Honduran Constitution and other federal statutes were and are the supreme law of the land and thus enforced above any international law. However, assuming for a moment that Honduras had a monist legal system, one could ask what international law was broken? Was the former president killed? Was there mass genocide? Were any other nations invaded or involved? The answer to all these questions is "no," and I am left asking on what legal grounds does any other nation-state or international organization have to base their demands for the restoration of Zelaya to the presidency?

On Wednesday, July 1, the OAS stated that the Honduran "coup leaders have three days to restore deposed President Manuel Zelaya to power." At this point one may ask "or what?" According to the OAS, if Honduras does not comply, then the OAS would "suspend Honduras in its rights and duties in [the OAS]." This follows a U.N. resolution, adopted June 30, to not recognize any government in Honduras but Zelaya's. Furthermore, the U.S. has indicated that the only possible resolution of the situation is to return Zelaya to power, and a State Department spokesperson said that the "U.S. was still reviewing whether to cut off aid to" Honduras.

Honduran independence has been established by history and recognized by the U.N. As an independent nation-state, Honduras has exclusive sovereignty within the limits of its jurisdiction, which are its borders. Honduras was experiencing a Constitutional crisis due to the illegal actions of its president, and the other two branches of government sought to resolve the crisis by removing the president. As a result, the U.N., the OAS and the United States have taken upon themselves to return the dictator in the making, and ally to Hugo Chavez, to power by threatening the country with lack of aid, oil and assistance. Yet the U.N., the OAS and the U.S. have no legal grounds to demand his return and have defied Honduran sovereignty and exclusive jurisdiction. It is my fear that a dangerous precedent is being set, one that opens the door to interfering with a nation-state's government simply because its constitutional actions are disagreed with.

In closing, I will ask two remaining questions. Why Honduras? Why not North Korea or Iran where international law and human rights violations have long and detailed histories?

Obama condems Zalaya-like behavior

Small democratic nations allied to us (Israel, Honduras, Columbia) get the shaft and thugs get a pat on the back.

My friend Hit & Run brings to our attention the latest example -- we excoriate Honduras for the same thing that happened in Niger. But how is Niger treated?

WASHINGTON, July 1 (Reuters) - The U.S. government voiced concern on Wednesday over actions taken by Niger's President Mamadou Tandja to extend his rule in the West African country.

"These decisions undermine Niger's efforts over the last ten years to advance good governance and the rule of law," White House spokesman Robert Gibbs said in a statement.

Tandja responded to the rejection by Niger's highest court of his plan to seek at least another three years in power by sacking the judges and naming a new Cabinet.

Maybe if the leaders of Honduras pretended they were going to nationalize U.S. businesses located there,or entered into a discount bananas program with the Kennedys like Chavez's discounted oil one, they'd get better treatment.

I use the ALA100 with my own loop. You can get more aperture by rolling your own loop, and you save a bit of money. Also, you can make it into a portable system. The ALA100 is a fantastic product with one big bug, namely the use of a BNC on a device that could be used outdoors. [You need to put it in a NEMA box for permanent outdoor use. Now granted, I've bought lots of pro-gear that expects NEMA box use a well, i.e. the assume you are doing system integration.] Also note that the Wellbrook loops are not shielded. They interact with whatever metal is nearby.

Note that the Wellbrook 1530 loop isn't big enough for LW. They might say it is, but trust me, it isn't. Using the ALA100, it doesn't begin to really kick ass until you have about 25ft of wire on it. I've used 40ft loops in the boonies.

I've been testing out my antenna using HFDL, which gives you position data on the transmitting source.

http://www.lazygranch.com/temp/pchfdl_11354_07012009_2.jpg
This is 7000 statute miles of data reception, a tougher criteria than CW or voice. The noise rejection of the Wellbrook design helps under these conditions.

I've done side by side comparisons with the KIWA loop. The KIWA isn't as good as my ALA100 setup IF (big if) you use a good radio. The KIWA is filtered, so it often covers up for the lack of filtering in your receiver.

1) One cares about whether one can get 24KHz reproduction out of a tape machine (or any other reproducer) beause the flat response curve at the high end actually affects the sound at lower frequencies (the characteristics of musical instruments are that many carry large numbers of harmonics, which, even if you cannot hear the harmonic itself, would change the intrinsic sound were they not there at all)

2) There is NO mp3 player that can as accurately reproduce a complex audio waveform as well as a high end cassette machine. I don't care how many samples you take of a complex waveform with an ADC/DAC system, the resultant playback waveform will never represent the original analog waveform as well as a high end analog device. Even a simple 1000 Hz sine wave will not come out as a pure sine wave after digital conversion, it will be a series of stepped square waves. You may not be able to tell the difference with your ear, as long as there are enough of those little steps, but that's not the point. The point is, it will not "run circles around" a high end analog device.

If you take a look at a 1khz square wave after digital conversion, you'll see ringing at both ends of the flat top. You'll see that same ringing wherever there is a hard rise or fall. Is it audible? Oh yeah. More so on a naked square wave. Less so in complex music. But you can hear it.

You'll see this wherever there is hard digital filtering, such as anti-aliasing on CD players. You'll see it where there is copious amount of data loss, as in MP3.

An MP3, at it's best is a 4:1 data loss. The songs on iTunes and elsewhere are mostly 10:1 data loss. Sometimes more, sometimes less.

Noise may be reduced, but it's hardly high fidelity audio. And though cassettes have their many flaws, a properly set up Nak will have more noise, but far less digital artifacting and zero data loss than any MP3.

I have a few old reel to reel tape recorders/players.Two of them were made by Webcor, they look just alike each other.One of my other reel to reel tape recorders/player is larger than the Webcors and it has three speeds.I own several other old much smaller reel to reel tape recorders/players too.I bought all of them at thrift stores and flea markets years and years ago.

Sampling frequency 2.8224 MHz Dynamic range 120 dB
Frequency range 20 Hz - 50 kHz

The SACD format is capable of delivering a dynamic range of 120 dB from 20 Hz to 20 kHz and an extended frequency response up to 100 kHz!
Try to duplicate that with any "high-end analog device".

Quantum physicists state the universe is digital. It is your inferior sensory organs which can not resolve the digital universe.
Get over it! Radio is the enemy - ANALog is dead!

You don't need a transformer to "do it" correctly.

Yeah, that's what people do and then post complaints here.

I'll let you in on a little secret. In order to be successful you have to remove obstacles not create them. You don't need to transform an impedance that close to the coax impedance.

You don't want something that flies in the air or in space to come down prematurely whether it is an 747 or a F16. Marine environments are also tough.

Generally what you get with HFDL is a series of routes that make sense. For instance, you monitor Alaska, and you get routes to Alaska.
But there is often an odd route or two that shows up. Using internet tracking, you can see if the flight makes sense. But these flights that are at a long distance need two things in common. One, they need to be squittering on a frequency that really doesn't make sense for the area. Two, it probably needs a sweet spot.

Are there some instructions regarding your psk map?

Chosen one? Well, he was chosen over the old geezer and his whacked out running mate..

Probably what your parents were saying to you when you went off the deep end, hoping against hope you were just on drugs.

What happened in Hawaii? You really don't know?

Obama was born there, as any non-birthtard knows. All the evidence shows he was born there. What do you think happened? I won't laugh...much.

And Jack Lord probably wasn't his daddy. I doubt Tom Selleck was either.

ROTFL. She really would like to meet with you. I knew you wouldn't do it, but I asked.

Sorry. Apples and oranges.

I once built a two transistor pre-amp that was flat from 10 Hz to over 2
MHz. Thing is, it didn't have all that good of a distortion figure.
Digitally reproduced analog waveforms have distortion. There is simply no way around it. You cannot make a true, perfect sine waveform out of a bunch of square waves. It can't be done.

Further, the universe is most certainly not digital. About the closest thing you get to digital in the universe is a hydrogen atom. But even the radio frequency wave output from a hydrogen atom is a sine wave: analog. Digital can only be a representation, in various degrees of fidelity, of an analog signal.

This photograph http://rexcurry.net/pledge-allegiance-pledge-allegiance2.jpg (and many others photographs on the same web site that archives the work of the documentarian Dr. Rex Curry) illustrates a difference between the Pledge of Allegiance in the past and in the present. In the past, there was time when the flag and pledge occurred outside, and no flag was inside the classroom(s). That practice emphasized the militaristic nature of the dogma touted by Edward Bellamy (author of "Looking Backward") and his cousin and cohort Francis Bellamy (author of the "Pledge of Allegiance"). The Bellamy cousins called their scheme "military socialism." Under the old pledge ritual children either 1) assembled and waited outside before school began, enduring injurious weather, until the forced ritual chanting was led by the teacher, or 2) they entered the school and then, at a designated time, they marched outside into injurious weather.
http://rexcurry.net/pledge-of-allegiance-images.html

It is difficult to say whether a common modern practice is better or worse: there is often a flag in EVERY classroom. State government dictates the expenditure and the size of the federal flags and their ubiquitous placement. The omnipresent flag is viewed all the time by all children. It still looks backward to many. The orwellian ritual then occurs via a barking or pre-recorded voice over an intercom, often accompanied by martial music and even bizarre video piped over school televisions.

The pledge tracks the book "1984" by George Orwell (1949). Orwell describes a government that uses these slogans: Freedom is Slavery; War is Peace; Ignorance is Strength. The government bamboozled Americans into believing that collective robotic chanting in government schools daily is a beautiful expression of freedom.
Chanters let the catch-phrase "with liberty and justice for all"

delude them from the totalitarian reality of the behavior. Government schools maintain strength by maintaining ignorance about the pledge's true history. Wars over the pledge coincide with never-ending wars abroad under Bellamy's military socialism in the USA. http://sites.google.com/site/edwardbellamysite/

Ouch. This goes into the “I-don’t-know-whether-to-laugh-or-cry-or-both” file. See the video on Youtube. http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=BssWWZ3XEe4

Perhaps, during the rise of the National Socialist German Workers Party, each American child began to put his left index finger under his nose while performing the American "Nazi" salute and chanting mechanically in unison, and thereafter goose-stepping into the school house. Francis Bellamy was alive during the rise of the National Socialist German Workers Party. What did Francis Bellamy think about his pledge and it's salute, in view of the fact that Francis Bellamy also promoted socialism in the Nationalist movement?

It certainly can in my book. Just the speed error of tape drives me nuts. 90 dB Signal:Noise vs 70 dB.

Your 1 kHz tone on tape will intermodulate with the bias oscillator and produce bizarre 3rd order anomalies all over the spectrum. What does tall that do to your "large numbers of harmonics"?

Tape does not offer random access, and the difference in "transport control" is night and day.

I have a Cowon i7 FLAC player that I listen to with Grado headphones; the sound is exquisite. You are fooling yourself if you think an analog tape going 1 7/8 ips sounds better.

Also, licensed hams have info at www.qrz.com

Here's mine:

If I "click for more detail" on another ham, it gives me bearing and distance info. There are generally 2 paths (short and long). If you get more than 2 you are bouncing off the moon or the distant station is precisely on the opposite side of the earth.

IRAN-CONTRA ERA

C.I.A. & DRUGS FACT SHEET

"Without the Honduran military there would have been no Contras. $14 million [to finance arms] came from drugs." [through Honduras.] - Oliver North's diary 7/5/85.- Oliver North then intervened to get an absurdly lenient sentence for General Jose Bueso-Rosa, convicted of smuggling tons of cocaine into the U.S.

"We don't need to investigate [C.I.A.'s role in drug dealing]. We already know. The evidence is there." - Jack Blum, former Chief Counsel to John Kerry's Subcommittee on Narcotics and Terrorism in 1996 Senate Hearings. - The Medellin Cartel gave more than $10 million to the contras.

"In my 30 year history in DEA, the major targets of my investigations almost invariably turned out to be working for the CIA." - Dennis Dayle, Chief of an elite DEA unit in Central America.

"With respect to [drug trafficking by] the resistance forces... it is not a couple of people. It is a lot of people." - Alan Fiers former CIA deputy for Central American ops.

FOUR FIRMS LISTED BY DEA AS MAJOR SMUGGLING OPERATIONS WERE ON CIA's LIST OF APPROVED VENDORS AND EACH RECEIVED HUNDREDS OF THOUSANDS OF DOLLARS IN STATE DEPARTMENT SUBSIDIES WHILE THEY WERE DEALING DRUGS: DIACSA - SETCO - VORTEX - FRIGORIFICOS DE PUNTARENAS.

Miguel Felix Gallardo and Rafael Caro-Quintero supplied the contras with guns and money. Caro ran a Contra training camp in Veracruz. Together they smuggled 4 tons of cocaine a month into the U.S. Both were later tied to the murder of DEA agent Kiki Camarena.

THESE ARE SOME OF THE PILOTS WHO FLEW DRUGS ON CIA PROTECTED FLIGHTS INTO THE U.S.:

Michael Palmer * Werner Stoltz * Floyd Carlton * Bill Cooper * Tosh Plumley * Marcos Aguado * Bo Abbott * Gerardo Duran * Pat Foley * Frank Moss * Tito Carrasco * Barry Seal * John Allen * Cesar Rodriguez * Teofilo Watson * Alfredo Caballero * Gary Betzner

CIA FUNDED AIRLINES CONNECTED WITH DRUG OR WEAPONS SMUGGLING:

So. Air Transport * SETCO * EVERGREEN * Hondu Carib * Arrow Air

IN A COURT OF LAW THE STRONGEST FORM OF DIRECT EVIDENCE IS TESTIMONY BY EYEWITNESSES. THE FOLLOWING ARE EYEWITNESSES TO CIA DRUG TRAFFICKING WHO HAVE NEVER BEEN ALLOWED TO TESTIFY:

Celerino Castillo (DEA) * Michael Ruppert (LAPD)* Mike Levine (DEA) * Bill Tyree (Spl forces) * John Mattes (Fed. Pub Defender) * Dee Ferdinand * Jack Terrell (Contra supporter) * Anabelle Grimm (DEA) Brad Ayers (DEA) * Bo Abbott (Air America) * Tosh Plumley (CIA) * Ralph McGehee (CIA) * Lt Col. Bo Gritz (ret.) (US Army Spl. Forces) * Dr. David Sabow, MD (brother of murdered Marine Col. Jim Sabow) *Dois G. (Chip) Tatum (CIA) * Gene Wheaton (Army CID)

Isn't equating compression ration or data rates to data loss a bit misleading? Sure, MP3 and AAC are lossy codecs, but a lossless codec such as FLAC reduces the data rate without loss of the original content. The amount of original signal lost by the use of AAC or MP3 compression is much less than you imply with your numbers.

I would expect an analog system to have no digital artifacts. But, you admit there is more noise, isn't that also a loss of 'data'. But you also ignore any reduction in bandwidth that occurs with magnetic recording. Also, at its best the Nak may have higher distortion than a high end MP3 player.

Cassette decks have their BW specified at -20 db because at higher levels, head/media saturation limit useful bandwidth.

Yes, but the error from a perfect sine wave may be extremely small. In fact much lower than the noise in most analog recording methods.

The same can be said for analog recording systems. They also introduce noise and distortion into the analog signal.

I work with a lot of 20 to 30 year olds and many of them have a severe hearing loss, listening to their car stereos is nearly torture for anyone who can hear normally, they almost all have a huge boost on the top end. It sounds horrible, but they think it's great. My one friend is deaf from jet engine noise, but he's 60 years old, not 23. By the time these kids are 50-60 they will be stone deaf.

My viewpoint about you is only reading what you have posted. You are ignorant about what you post but you will not acknowledge it. The reason why could range from being a whack job to being a consummate lier.

Being a whack job Troll fits in there as the most likely possibility.
Since you generate crap posts in the range of 1,000 to 2,000 a month must keep you pretty busy.

The transformer type would be a BALUN but it is not needed.

The loop and lead in are all made of the same 50 ohm coax. The shield of the lead in and both sides of the loop are all connected together.
The shield is opened halfway around the loop so the shield is balanced around the loop. One side of the loop center conductor is connected to the lead in center conductor. The other side of the loop center conductor is connected to the joined shield connection.

The split shield picks up the far electric field equally and at opposite polarity so it is canceled. The coax center conductor has current induced in it from the magnetic field since it is shielded from the electric field. For the size of the loop the output will be less compared to an antenna that uses both fields to generate a signal to the radio but it also does a better job of canceling local noise sources provided the noise source is far enough from the antenna that its electric field will be canceled by the balanced shield.

The result is a generally lower noise floor. Since I live in suburbia noise is a bigger issue than picking up the signal.

In reverse order of preference:

1. Common mode antennas are near worthless around here.

2. Hertzian voltage antennas perform a little better than common mode.

3. Any type of hertzian closed loop antenna performs better than the voltage type.

4. The hertzian balanced shield loop antenna works better than 1 thru 3 above.

You will notice a trend in a certain antenna parameter in the order of preference above. I'll leave it as an exercise for the reader to discover it.

The universe is analog not digital so you get over it. Quantum physics stating the universe is digital is an oversimplification at best and I'm being very generous.

By the way, you have already been assimilated by the analog borg.

Radio is my hobby.

There are several technical criteria that must be met with digital recording so that it can equal analog. These criteria must be met in both directions, analog to digital, and then digital back to analog being a complete process.

The sampling rate must be twice the highest frequency you want to record so if the analog frequency is 22 KHz then the minimum sample rate is 44 KHz. A higher sample rate is better. For this sampling scheme to work well the conversion in either direction should be low pass filtered. This scheme has the 22 KHz sine wave represented by two steps, which is very coarse.

The analog filtering will help the reproduced analog look like the original recorded analog signal but the conversion sampling has several types of imprecision to contend with besides sample rate. Just as important are sample levels. The smaller the sample level the more precise the reproduced analog will be.

So the two main parameters are the number of samples made in time and voltage or to look on a sine wave on a graph the horizontal and vertical axis. The smaller the steps in either axis the closer the digital stepped waveform approximate the analog. Then a low pass filter smoothes out the tiny steps as a way of "polishing" the digital waveform to look even more like the analog.

The problem with the above conversion scheme is the sample imprecision in time and voltage, which leads to conversion noise and distortion. The precision can be improved with an increased number of steps in either axis. Increasing the number of voltage steps means the sampling number must be numerically larger and increasing the sampling rate increases the number of samples that must be processed and stored for the same length of the recording so higher quality means bigger numbers and more of them.

This is a big problem for digital recording, storage, and reproduction. If you want high quality you need the electronics to operate rapidly and generate more data requiring larger storage. The electronics operating rapidly consumes power and large data storage also costs more money so the solution is low sample rates and small sample numbers.

Along with small sample numbers and low sample rates, data storage requirements are further reduced with compression algorithms that are lossy or in other words further distort the data. Here "lossy" means some of the data is thrown out and not saved to storage.

The financial cost of these problems also burdens the transmission of digital data similar for the digital storage cost. Higher quality means higher transmission rates similar to larger storage requirements. Higher transmission rates means the signal must occupy more spectrum. For this reason and others the IBOC and DRM sounding "better" in the same band space is just plain BS.

So basically, regardless of the sample size and rate used you have inherent sampling and anti-alias filtering distortion so the converted analog waveform can never be as good as the original but using more power, band space, and storage it can be close.

We are all used to the continual improvement in electronics where they run faster with less power and storage becoming cheaper, smaller, and lighter with time, so with time all this can be overcome except the amount of band space needed for transmission. Here improvements in electronics cannot overcome basic physics.

You are clearly the one overwhelmed. We don't operate at the quantum level and neither do objects larger than the chained molecular level that we interact with so don't be so stupid to conjecture that because the science of fundamental matter has quanta energy levels that is the way macro physics world operates because it doesn't.

Wow, you know Nyquist.

Commonly audio (music) is sampled with 16 bits.

CDs have been around for many years and seem to have adequately addressed these problems. For many people, MP3 players also appear to adequately address the issues.

You present sample rate and quantization as issues, but fail to back that up with any reference the levels commonly used and their comparison to mag tape or any other storage method. If you add the comparisons you might realize that in many cases these issues are irrelevant.

I don't know where you have been, but 1 TB disk drives cost $120 or less.
Also, since music players with 30 hour battery life are readily available, the power needed to handle the data at audio rates is not really a problem.

1500-2000 uncompressed CDs can fit on a single $120 disk drive. I don't see where the big problem is.

Yes, and in most cases those doing the compression are able to select the degree of loss by selecting bit rate.

Of course this discussion is about portable musics players (Walkman), not IBOC or DRM. Broadcasting digital signals adds other considerations that were not part of the discussion. With IBOC (on AM) and DRM, the amount of compression needed to meet bandwidth requirements is significant. The data rates are lower than most would consider useable on any MP3 player.

Since you introduce radio to the thread. I doubt you can find an AM radio transmission that doesn't also degrade the signal. Few, if any, AM receivers offer 22 kHz audio bandwidth. At best the S/N ratio is 45-50 dB. Commonly distortion is well over 1%. So, I wouldn't consider an AM broadcast anything close to the original signal. FM, while better, also degrades a signal.

I live in a community of about 10,000 people. We have 2 local radio stations, one AM and one FM and both transmit in glorious digital radio. Every Friday night the fire department raffles off an HD radio and the citizens go crazy over it! The town counsel just declared June 30th as HD Radio Day and the whole town celebrated! The festivities were on both radio stations and the WHOLE town was listening (unless of course you were at the HD radio party in the town hall). All the store merchants including the local Wal-Mart are having a trade-your-radio-in day. If you bring in your old radio they will give you $20 off a new digital radio. Next month the town is planning on having a town picnic and all the old radios collected will be burned in a big pile. (And the picnic will be on the radio for those shut-ins who are unable to attend). Thank God for glorious HD radio.

Sounds similar to that new HD Radio commercial about the rush to buy the remaining JVC HD Radio in-dash receiver, the only one that hasn't "downgraded" to just "HD Radio Ready", having to fight back consumers with fire hoses - LOL, fucking HD Radio losers! Where the fuck is Eduardo? I miss him!
